U. S. Leaders Urge President To Take Strong Stand in Speech

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Pleas that President Roosevelt take a determined stand against the aggressor powers in his broadcast to the American people tomorrow night came from several sources yesterday as the Chief Executive labored through several Sunday hours on the address that has captured the attention of much of the world.

In consultation with Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, of New York, who has assisted him in preparation of some of his most important declarations, Mr. Roosevelt was whipping into shape the substance of his "fireside chat," while numerous peace organizations announced a three-day rally for later in the week, "timed for reaction to the President's broadcast."

The rapidly mounting interest in the address was augmented by these developments:

1. Wendell Willkie called on the President to "'give a forthright, courageous and revealing message that will unite Americans . . . and serve notice to totalitarian rulers everywhere that America intends to help stop aggressor powers and totalitarianism."

2. From 2,000 signers, most with nationally known names, came a petition that the speech "tell what we must do to insure the security of the United States by hastening the defeat of the aggressors." It added that "we pledge to you our loyal support" for "strong action, even armed action."

3. Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, asked in a statement that the President "speak with firmness . . . to the effect that this Government will not tolerate longer any further intererfence from any source whatsoever in our own defense efforts and our immediate aid to England." He directed his statement chiefly against strikes in defense industries.

4. A "National Anti-War Congress" to be held here Friday, Saturday and Sunday, was announced by the Keep America Out of War Congress and six other noninterventionist organizations. Among speakers will be Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana; Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Representative Jeannette Rankin (Republican), of Montana; Dr. Maynard Kreuger, of the University of Chicago; Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Sidney F. Goldstein, Norman Thomas, Mrs. Robert A. Taft, John T. Flynn, chairman of the Keep America Out of War Congress.

Other phases of the country's foreign relations situation found these developments:

Representative Curtis (Republican), of Nebraska, said some signatures had been obtained on his petition to take his anticonvoy resolution from the Foreign Af-

Indo-China Incident

Japanese Seize $10,000,000 Of American-Owned Products

By the Associated Press

Hanoi, French Indo-China, May 25.—Japanese soldiers broke down the doors of two Haiphong warehouses today and removed $10,000,000 worth of United States products belonging to two American companies.

The goods had been blocked from reaching the central Chinese government.

The companies are the Far Eastern Trading Co. and the North American Syndicate.

The Japanese, charging that the American companies were merely blinds to cover the real Chinese owners, had prevented reshipment of the goods, including trucks and tires, since last September.

While Charles Reed, American consul, made repeated efforts to release the products, the Japanese repeatedly demanded that the Indo-Chinese government turn them over to Japanese military authorities.

The Japanese military mission in Indo-China sent two letters to the American companies announcing they intended to remove the goods. They demanded that the warehouse keys be turned over to them by 7 p. m. Saturday.

The American firms refused after informing the Indo-Chinese government, through Reed, of the Japanese letters.

The Japanese, 13 hours after the deadline expired, smashed the doors and took the goods to seven Japanese freighters waiting at Haiphong to load.

The Indo-Chinese government was expected to ask the Vichy government to protest to Tokyo.

Food Will Win This War Too, Says McNutt

American Forum Panel Agrees Farm Output Must Rise

American farm production must be stepped up and foods now wasted must be used if the United States is to supply Britain and at the same time remain healthy, a panel agreed last night on the American Forum of the Air broadcast from the Willard Hotel.

The discussion, which took the place of the forum's usual Sunday night debates, covered "Food and Defense," in cooperation with the National Nutrition Conference for Defense which begins a three-day session here today. The conference was called by President Roosevelt.

Speakers on last night's panel were Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator; Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture; Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States; Dr. Russell M. Wilder, of the Mayo Clinic; M. L. Wilson, director of extension work, Department of Agriculture; David Dietz, science editor, Scripps-Howard newspapers, and William Lawrence, science editor, New York Times.

Food May Win War

American food, declared McNutt, may win the present war as it won the World War in 1918. He called on members of the conference to "lay out a program that will effect a closer union between the farmers who grow our beef, pork, mutton and wheat, dairy products and green vegetables; the industries which process and distribute these foods to the ultimate consumer, and the medical and public health people who know the scientific answers."

Asked if the individual could depend on food alone for necessary vitamins and minerals, Dr. Wilder replied in the affirmative, adding that all bread should be "whole

Mediators Busy On Soft-Coal Statement

Recommendations To Be Published In a Few Days

The National Defense Mediation Board devoted hours yesterday to preparing final recommendations in the soft coal wage contract controversy following collapse of its mediation efforts, but made no report last night on its progress.

Vice Chairman William H. Davis said conferences had been held with representatives of the United Mine Workers and the Northern operators, but Southern operators who have refused to accept the contract agreed to by the Northerners and the miners did not participate. They will meet with board and union officials at 2 p. m. today. Several days may be required for drafting the board's recommendations.

Meanwhile, North American Aviation Co. officials were on their way here from Inglewood, Calif., to confer with board members on the threatened strike of C. I. O. workers, set for Wednesday at its aviation plant. The board has asked the workers not to strike pending board hearings on the wage increase demand for 11,000 employes, but 92 C. I. O. unions at Los Angeles were reported to have organized to support the strike. Minimum wages of 75 instead of 50 cents an hour and a flat 10-cent-an-hour increases for all employes are being sought.

Progress in Shipyard Strike

Other strike developments and situations, as reported by the Associated Press were:

Some progress was made in the back-to-work movement seeking to reopen 11 shipyards building Navy vessels in the San Francisco area as 400 shipyard laborers and painters in Oakland voted to go through picket lines established by 1,700 A. Fear of Losing Market Held Obstacle to Cheaper Milk

On August 12, 1940, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, charged that to the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association the pigs on the farms were more important than nursing mothers and children in Washington.

He called the rules under which surplus milk of the association was made available to a portion of Washington's needy, a "monstrosity and a joke."

A member of the association had told him, he said, that "our pigs have the surplus milk."

The same situation exists today. But those who are close to the situation do not blame it on the pigs.

They say, instead, that the producers are afraid that if those who are not now able to buy any milk are allowed to buy it at 5c a quart, they may be spoiling a market for sales at 13c. In such a situation, experience has shown, some farmers prefer to spill their milk on the ground.

The Secretary of Agriculture has promulgated regulations under which surplus milk may be bought by the needy in Washington, but the Surplus Marketing Administration places responsibility for limited scope of the regulations on the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which as the source of the milk dominates the distribution of it.

The association has consented to such distribution of its milk only to those who are certified for WPA, or those who are on public relief rolls.

A person who has been certified for WPA usually is a person who

Torpedo Planes Attack German Ships in Effort To Force Battle

By the Associated Press

London, May 25.—Vengeance hungry, the British fleet furrowed the North Atlantic tonight in pursuit of heavy units of the resurgent German navy, trying, as the admiralty put it, to bring the Nazis to "close action."

With aerial torpedoes, the fleet air arm was reported already to have blasted into the Germans, scoring at least one hit, and "operations are still proceeding."

The British were seeking a knock-down-drag-out battle to settle Germany's bold challenge to surface control of the Atlantic which was driven strikingly home early yesterday when the 15-inch guns of the new, 35,000-ton battleship Bismarck blasted the battlecruiser Hood apart with a shot on her magazine.

British Close in Pursuit

Last evening British torpedo-planes, combining reconnaissance with action, attacked the German units, of unspecified strength. These planes operate either from the broad decks of aircraft carriers or can be catapulated into the air. They are one of the most threatening weapons of a modern navy.

The tight-lipped admiralty said that after the "unlucky hit" on the Hood the German forces "made every effort to shake off pursuit." But the British apparently were close at heel, counting somewhat on damage they claimed against the Bismarck to slow her flight.

There was wide speculation that more powerful units of the fleet were speeding to the scene of action following the epic engagement of the Hood and Bismarck.

Press and public reaction to the loss was mixed. There was no apparent effort to hide grief over the destruction of the battlecruiser and her crew.

Fleet Still is Strong

Half-hearted efforts to console the public were seen in newspaper comment that Britain still has three times as many battleships as Germany.

Expressions of hope also were heard that the loss of the Hood might be compensated somewhat in awakening the United States to direct action to make her ocean patrol in the Western Hemisphere a more effective aid to Britain.

The United States has assumed protection of Greenland and it apparently was on the fringe of the American Western Hemisphere patrol zone that the Hood was sunk.

According to the best unofficial calculations here, the battle took place near the mouth of the Strait of Denmark, 250-mile stretch of water separating Greenland and British-occupied Iceland.

German claims that a battleship of the 35,000-ton King George V class was damaged and forced to retire met only official silence here.

Italian Army Of 8,570 Taken In Ethiopia

By International News Service

Cairo, (Monday) May 26.—British capture of an entire Italian army column, totaling 8,570 troops, in the northern lake region of Ethiopia was announced today in a communique saying this smashing triumph crowned "three days of fierce fighting."

Huge quantities of war materials were seized by the British victors after the Italians ran up the white flag of surrender, as the Duke of Aosta had already done last week in the Amba Alaji Mountain stronghold to the East.

Seven hundred civilians, who were with the Italian garrison in the lake region, were also taken into custody by the British.

The captured column consisted of 570 Italian troops, 5,000 colonials and 3,000 native Banda warriors.

The booty gained by the British forces included seven artillery guns and 170 machine guns, together with big stocks of munitions and motor transport units.

Calls Escorting 'Open War Act;' Charges Patrols Are 'Aggressive'

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 25.—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, commander of the German navy, in an unusual interview tonight warned the United States two days before a scheduled speech by President Roosevelt that American convoys for materials going to England would constitute an "open war act" which would be prevented by guns of the German navy is necessary.

The interview was granted to the Berlin representative of Domei, Japanese news agency, and was issued here by D. N. B., official German news agency.

In addition to warning against convoys, Admiral Raeder said the American patrol system was "aggressive" in character.

Declares Convoys Unlawful

"Since the nature of the cargoes of convoyed ships, according to American admissions, was established from the very beginning as contraband, resort to this type of convoy system would not be a neutral convoy in the sense of international lay or American treaties, but an open war act and a bare, unprovoked attack," the navy commander said.

"German naval forces would therefore be justified in taking measures against these contraband carriers, according to the law of sea warfare and would, by exercise of these rights, have to repulse with arms if necessary any hindrance, even against American warships.

"So far as the so-called patrol system goes, its aggressive character already has been established."

"Means Shooting," He Says

The grand admiral was equally sharp concerning the patrol system and said nobody could expect a German sea commander to stand idly by while "his position was reported to the enemy by an American warship, certainly not when a patrol ship follows him so long that strong British sea forces can be called up not only to hinder him in the execution of his task but also to destroy his ship and crew.

"He (the commander) faces in this case just as in the case of convoys an actual warlike act and is justified according to the recognized rules of war to demand cessation of hostile actions by the ship involved and if necessary to enforce it with arms."

Admiral Raeder said the German navy regards possible results of American efforts to see that war materials reach England as "very serious."

"Not only the press but also responsible members of the North American Government have expressed themselves in a way so that no doubt can exist over the aggressive character and conflict with international law of measures already taken and, above all, of those further proposed," Raeder said.

The grand admiral declared no and that "whoever imputes aggressive intentions to Germany does it against the better knowledge and with the intention of justifying their own aggressive plans and own will to interfere."

"The worry of the war agitators," he asserted, "is not a German attack but that they have not succeeded in creating the desired incident."

Raeder said that as far as convoys are concerned he could only confirm the view of President Roosevelt:

"Convoys mean shooting."

Vichy, May 25.—Gen. Maxime Weygand, generalissimo of France in the days of her defeat and now commander of all Vichy forces in North Africa, has thrown the weight of his approval behind the Petain government's plan for collaboration with Germany.

As Marshal Petain's proconsul for North Africa, Weygand made a special air trip to Fez, French Morocco, to make clear his position to the French colony there. His headquarters have been in Algiers.

Dispatches from Fez said Weygand in a speech to leading members of the French colony said:

"All Frenchmen concerned for the future of continental France as well as the empire should subscribe unanimously to the principles of the policy of collaboration decided on by the Marshal."

He concluded with an appeal for "discipline and union" and urged colonial leaders to "follow without hesitation the way mapped out by the venerated chief of the community of Frenchmen."

Greek King Tells How He Fled Crete

Bitter Night Spent With Shepherds; He Shares Their Food

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, May 25.—King George of Greece and his emigre government found a temporary haven in Egypt today en route from embattled Crete to British soil and the King himself told the stirring story of how the first swarms of Nazi parachutists concentrated on an area about his residence.

He reached Cairo after a hair-raising withdrawal from the besieged Greek island and, besides escaping the clouds of air-borne troops, his party had to dodge bullets of his own soldiers who thought they were 'chutists disguised in British and Greek uniforms.

In a proclamation issued immediately on his arrival he said Greece would continue the fight, and then in his own words told the weird story of his flight.

". . . After several days of intensive air attack, the crisis of the battle of Crete was reached when in the early morning of May 20 the enemy launched its air-borne offensive," the King said. "One of the main objectives for the German parachute troops was the area around the house where the premier and I lived."

Zamzam Survivors Given 'Slop' To Eat by Nazis, American Says

By Glenn M. Stadler

Biarritz, France, via Paris, May 24 (Delayed).—Blacked out and her radio silent, the Egyptian liner Zamzam was plowing through the South Atlantic in the gray dawn of April 17 when all hell broke loose.

Two shells arched from a German sea raider and sent up geysers near the Zamzam. They were followed quickly by 53 more shells, nine of which crashed into the hapless ship carrying 140 Americans and 190 others.

That was the start of the story related today by survivors who roamed the Atlantic 33 days in a German merchant ship before they were landed safely on the Atlantic coast of France.

Two Americans and eight other persons aboard the Zamzam were injured badly in the shelling, and many suffered minor wounds. The Americans, Francis Vicovari, of New York, and Ned Laughinghouse, of Wilson, N. C., remained aboard the sea raider, which rescued all aboard the Zamzam, when it transferred the others to a German merchant ship which brought them to France.

(Other reports indicated Vicovari and Laughinghouse were with the other survivors in Biarritz where negotiations were being conducted for their repatriation.)

Charles J. V. Murphy, representative of Fortune magazine, in the first comprehensive account of the Zamzam incident, told of his experiences in common with those of the other Americans.

'Expect to Hold Island,' General Says; 14 Planes Blasted by R.A.F.

By the Associated Press

Cairo (Monday), May 26.—Allied soldiers waging bitter hand-to-hand fights are slowly closing in on the German parachute and air invaders of Crete, the British indicated today, and a British military observer predicted it would be possible to hold the island on which the war in the Middle East hinges.

The general headquarters here officially announced late last night the first break in the eerie sky parade of German troops to the island, which began in full force seven days ago.

Troop landings by the Germans, a communique said, continued Saturday, "but on a substantially reduced scale as compared with the previous two days."

Thus the hint that German troop reinforcements through the air were slackening coincided with the renewed activity of the R. A. F., which sent long-range fighters and bombers back to the battle Friday.

Heavy Battle Raging

(The German radio in a broadcast heard Sunday night by N. B. C. in New York reported heavy aerial combats over Crete, especially over Canea, where British fighters were said to have attempted to stop dive-bombing attacks. It was stated four British planes were shot down.)

Out of the surging battle came Maj. Gen. T. G. Heywood, the chief of the British military mission to the Greeks, who brought encouragement to the empire. He reached Cairo with King George II of Greece and the Greek government, after a hazardous escape from Crete aboard a destroyer.

"I think it will be possible to hold Crete," the major general declared. "The British and dominion troops and marines fight well in this type of fighting, that is, man to man."

The sharpest fighting was reported between Malemi, where the Germans have secured a hold on the important airdrome, and Canea, capital of Crete which was one of three cities the British said were bombed indiscriminately and destructively by massed German fighters Saturday.

Enemy Losses Great

Intensive dive-bombing attacks were made in the Malemi-Canea area, the general headquarters said.

"As on previous days, our forces in this area have inflicted very heavy losses on the enemy, including continued destruction by shellfire of his aircraft on the ground," the communique added.

The R. A. F. was credited with the destruction of 14 German planes.

The island had become a maelstrom of aerial conflict, with German planes reported laying waste to great areas of Canea, the capital, and two other principal cities of the Greek island, Retino and Candia.

Maj. Gen. Heywood declared that the withdrawal from Greece and the fighting in Crete "are part of one action."

"I hope we have reached the last stage and will hold out in view of the nature of the fighting in the island and the Germnas' difficulty in obtaining reinforcements for the troops they succeeded in landing," he added.

The Germans dumped explosives on Canea, Retino and Candia from 2 p. m. to 8 p. m. yesterday in methodical raids chutists and the allied troops in that area.

"As the main force of the enemy separated us from our troops it became imperative for us to withdraw in order to frustrate their plans.

From Managya and later from Therisson, where we stopped in order to follow the course of battle, it proved impossible for us to keep in touch either with the remaining members of the government or with the allied command. We later discovered military and civil authorities also had tried without success to communicate with us.

"After careful examination of the situation thus created in concert with our responsible advisers, we became convinced our continued presence in Crete would handicap the conduct of military operations.

"We consequently decided with profound regret to leave this heroic island.

Only Course Possible

"We leave Crete for the time being to proceed to British territory to which we have been invited. This is the only course which will enable us to carry out the duties imposed on us by the interests of the nation."

It was one of the most remarkable journeys ever made by a king. Many times he hurled himself into Crete ditches to escape Nazi fire. He crossed a 7,000-foot mountain; slept in the open with shepherds, ate their food, and finally reached the southern shore of Crete astride a mule.

The monarch and his party in their 72-hour trek were mistaken for German parachutists dressed in British and Greek uniforms, and one or two Greek patrols fired at them. No one was wounded.

So narrow was the escape of the King from the Germans that when it was decided to flee the island and men were sent back to the royal residence to obtain the King's baggage, the house was filled with German soldiers.

So many planes were in the air that members of the party said it was a wonder the refugees were not spotted. On several occasions the rearguard of New Zealand troops and Greek gendarmes opened fire on the parachutists to turn them back.

An account of the trip was given here by Maj. Gen. T. G. Heywood, head of the British military mission in Greece, and Col. J. S. Blunt, British military attache, who took the party off the island.

Accompanying the King were Premier-War Minister Emmanuel Tsouderos and other members of the Greek government; British Minister Sir Michale Palairet and Lady Palairet and the British legation staff.

King George, after a rest in Egypt, will continue on to British territory where he said he and Greece's "lawful government" would continue to function.

He Dives for Trenches

Parachutists landed within a short distance of the King several times during the trip. The royal party repeatedly saw machine gunning from the air but was not directly under Nazi fire.

The monarch, wearing a steel helmet, jumped into trenches often but was in the highest spirits throughout the journey, those who accompanied him said. He left at the "last possible moment only because remaining would have required troops to guard him and thus deplete the fighting forces."

A graphic description of the strange attack was given by members of the royal party

It began with heavy air attacks May 20 and at 8 a. m. "we suddenly saw showers of parachutists, swarms and swarms of them, then aircraft carriers and gliders. This continued until noon and there were terrific dogfights in all the areas where they landed."

The royal party's first knowledge of the attack came when a "couple of squadrons of Messerschmitts roared over the house. The King, Prince Peter and others came out to see what was happening. A number of squadrons of bombers appeared to be bombing targets on the coast but it still looked only like a heavy airraid. Then we saw so many planes we realized something bigger was happening.

"Gliders circled over the house and some landed in the King's garden at the foot of the hill. Troop-carrying planes landed in threes and seemed to be endless. A whole company of parachutists came down 800 yards from the house.

"Parachutes were red or green and we could see French chalk popping off as they opened. Many did not open."

"French chalk is used to pack parachutes to keep them from rotting from moisture.)

Col. Blunt said that the air seemed full of parachute troops and the machine-gunning from the planes with the antiaircraft fire from the ground made a terrific noise.

Since it was evident, he said, that they were in the midst of a large-scale action, it was decided to get the King away. The party made off with only the belongings they could carry in their hands and with the platoon of New Zealanders and the Greek gendarmes as guards.

Here is Col. Blunt's account of the trip:

"More parachutists fell directly on the road we were to take so we went over the hill, our rearguard opening fire on the parachutists to keep them from coming our way.

"Every 5 or 10 yards we had to take cover.

"Hundreds of planes were whizzing in all directions. We could see their rear gunners plainly. It's a wonder we were not spotted and machine-gunned.

"We were under fire of one or

two Greek patrols which must have thought us parachutists in British and Greek uniforms.

"At 11 a. m. the party went into a cave occupied by a Greek gardener and set out again at 3:30 p. m. (Tuesday).

"We obtained mules.

"A party was sent back to the house for the King's belongings, but found parachutists occupying it.

"The King's party crossed a mountain 7,000 feet high and spent a bitterly cold night in the open with shepherds.

Dined on Boiled Mutton

"We saw further parachute landings and flares sent up by parachutists signaling their planes for food supplies.

"The New Zealand troops had a hard day and little to eat, but they carried automatic rifles, ammunition and grenades up the steep rocky heights. None fell out and all reached the summit at dusk.

"The shepherds gave us boiled mutton. We drank sheep's milk and ate sheep's cheese. We had a little bread which we all shared, including the King.

"We all slept in the open without heavy clothes or blankets.

"When we awoke we could hear each other's teeth chattering.

"The King shared all hardships and had high praise for the New Zealand troops.

"At the top of the hill, we were told the descent was difficult for animals so we went down on foot. It took ten hours solid going and I've never seen anything steeper."

Maj. Gen. Heywood described some of the early German action.

The temporary British legation on a hill overlooking Caena was attacked. Bombs falling just outside blew down its windows and doors buried British Consul Mead in a trench. He was dug out unconscious but later revived.

Heywood told this story of the fighting and his experiences:

"The parachutists got a footing in the hills.

"Near a camp of 3,000 Italian prisoners guarded by a company of Greeks, parachutists descended. Each German had enough weapons for three men, apparently with the plan of releasing and arming the Italians. This apparently failed as the Italians were not disposed to join in the fight.

"They also reelased Cretan civil prinsoners clad in their quaint striped costumes but these, on receiving arms, turned against the Germans. The last I saw of one of them he was going off to join in the defense of his home village.

"After failing to contact the royal party due to a breakdown in communications, a meeting place finally was arranged on the southern shore of Crete, where they were to be taken off by a British warship on the night of May 22-3. We then started out for the point with the British Legation staff and other Greek officials.

"The legation party left for the rendezvous in three cars at 3 a. m. without escort, because all troops were needed for the line which the general commanding the Canea area had thrown up against invaders south of Canea and Suda Bay.

"Running the gantlet of parachutists, the group got into the mountains, where we continued on mules to the south coast. There 15 members, including two injured persons and two elderly legation employes, crowded on a small Greek caique for a rough trip along coastal waters to the chosen embarkation point.

"The meeting of the two parties was an extraordinary sight.

"We were in a beautiful gorge with a bubbling stream and blooming oleanders when suddenly we saw tired soldiers coming and then the King on a mule. He was wearing a tin hat and smiling as fit as anything.

"The King was greeted by the villagers, who kissed his hand.

"Lady Palairet did the cooking for the legation party with what sparse food we could gather in the poor villages of south Crete.

"The two parties spent the final day in a sheltered point near the beach, keeping out of sight of the numerous German planes passing overhead.

"After dark, a ship appeared. I signaled with an army torch, but the vessel was too far off for me to read the reply signal. There was no way of knowing whether it was an enemy ship or one of ours.

"I played what really was a mean trick on one of the younger diplomats. I sent him and the baggage out on a caique knowing if he were captured he would have diplomatic status.

"A little while later the caique returned but we did not know what would be in it so the New Zealanders were lined up with rifles trained on it until we heard a friendly voice call out in English."

At dawn last Friday all were aboard a British destroyer and it was pulling away from Cretan waters for Egypt.

Col. Blunt said that even after the trip across the island the King cherished the idea of staying there in some remote point on its south shore.

April 9," Murphy related. "On the fourteenth we picked up a message that a raider was chasing a Norwegian ship 20 miles away. It was peaceful until just at dawn on the morning of the seventeenth, when we were four days from Capetown.

"Capt. William Gray Smith sighted a ship four miles away. Eight minutes later—it was 5:55 a. m.—two shells fell in the water near the bridge.

"Some thought it was lightning, but the others realized their plight and began running around in pajamas. I ran to the deck where several ambulance men were sleeping.

"Smith tried to operate the Morse blinker, but a shell destroyed it. He ordered the Egyptian flag unfurled. Nine shells crashed into the ship. A German gunner later said 55 were fired.

"The captain ordered the lifeboats over the side, and at the same time turned the ship broadside, signifying that it had stopped. Grabbing a hand flashlight, he signaled the raider in Morse, 'Egyptian ship.'

"The firing ceased immediately. But during those ten minutes bedlam raged on the stricken ship."

The German raider bore the name "Tamesis of Tonsberg," the Americans said, and it was the Dresden to which they were transferred for the roundabout journey to France.

Laughinghouse, a tobacconist, was standing in a cabin with Harry Cawthjorne, another North Carolinian. Just as he remarked, "We'd better get the hell out of here," a shell struck. A splinter pierced Laughinghouse's brain. Aboard the German raider a doctor scraped the splenter from his brain and closed the wound.

The last the other Americans heard of him, he was said to have a 50-50 chance.

In another part of the ship an English doctor, Robert Starling, and Vicovari, leader of the 24 American ambulance drivers aboard the Zamzam, were running down a passageway toward the lifeboats when another shell exploded. The muscles were torn away from Vicovari's thigh, and the last word was that the German doctor thought he might have to amputate.

"The ambulance men did an extraordinary job under fire," Murphy said. "They carried Vicovari on deck and tried to lower him to a boat, but the Egyptians refused to let him descend until they were threatened. There were many similar incidents.

"Nobody could make those Egyptians do anything. They wanted to save themselves. Mrs. Starling tried to jump in a lifeboat, but the Egyptians pulled away, leaving her in the ocean which fortunately was calm.

"Persons who had to swim before they were picked up included Dr. Starling, Mr. and Mrs. Dedley Wright, of England; Mrs. Lillian Danielson, of Vilas, Kans., and her six children; Frederick W. Hoeing, of Rochester, N. Y.; Henry Emsheimer, of New York; Arthur Krida, of South Kent, Conn., and a British doctor, his wife and their 2-year-old daughter.

"The ambulance men assisted the women and children in finding rafts and pieces of wood to which to cling. A missionary whom the ambulance men named Gabriel swam around shouting that it was their sinning which brought on this disaster."

Slowly the raider approached the Zamzam. German marines boarded her at 7 a. m.

"By 7:30 all were aboard the raider", Murphy went on.

"On the whole we were treated courteously, with no more than the expected knocking around.

"Capt. Smith and I talked with the German captain, named Rogge, who expressed regret at the sinking and said he was astonished to see so mnay women and children among the American.

"He said he opened fire on the Zamzam because she was blacked out, her radio was silent and she was sailing under British admiralty orders. He said we would be taken to a neutral port."

At 2 p. m. three mines were planted in the Zamzam. They exploded and the ship went down without leaving a trace. The Americans were ordered below, where they took their places in the banks.

"When we awakened, we found the raider tied up to a merchantship," the story went on. "We transferred, except the three wounded the worst—Vicovari, Laughinghouse and an Englishman.

"The women got 35 cabins and the men slept shoulder to shoulder in a single room below. We had for breakfast gruel, tea and cereal, and slop for lunch and dinner.

"We made a written protest which was presented to Capt. Rogge when we contacted the raider again on the twenty-sixth. We were granted concessions, such as a little more meat in the soup."

The Dresden wheeled aimlessly through the South Atlantic day after day, and finally headed north on the journey, ending at St. Jean de Luz.

The Germans said the sea raider had been away from Germany for more than a year.

At first the men had to make out with one latrine, but later on they were permitted to go singly during the night to the decks. They had only a metal ladder leading to the hatch until they were allowed to install rope ladders and organize a drill.

"All of these negotiations were carried on with Capt. Jaeger, to whom I spoke in English," Murphy said. "He personally treated us courteously. We prepared a paper addressed to him and Rogge demanding that we be taken to a neutral port and not run the British blockade.

"We said, 'We wish to point out that we are not prisoners but citizens of a nonbelligerent country. If you wish to damage American relations, this seems the way to do it. You have no right to expose us to double jeopardy.'

"When we recontacted the raider on April 26 Rogge was impressed by our demands and promised better conditions."

The survivors received 20 Brazilian cigarettes every four days. They got diarrhea and the doctor prescribed charcoal and white bread, but the charcoal ran out. The doctor had a standing joke, saying "you should change your diet."

The general behavior and spirits of the unwilling guests aboard ship remained good, despite the ever-present fear of encountering a British battleship.

Laval Hopes America Will Accept a Role In Hitler's New Order for Europe

Former Vice Premier Pleads for Better 'Understanding'

Pierre Laval, France's chief champion of "collaboration" with Germany, pleads for American sympathy in the following exclusive and uncensored interview and declares that Adolf Hitler's new European order is open to the United States.—Editor's note.)

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Paris, May 24 (Uncensored, delayed via Vichy).—Pierre Laval, swarthy son of the Auvergne soil, stood today on a balcony overlooking the Champs Elysees, down which a column of German infantry marched behind a blaring military band.

The stock champion of "honorable collaboration" with Adolf Hitler in the latter's new European order shook his head, turned to me and said:

"Does the United States really want to paralyze our nation while it is striving toward recovery?

"Is the United States going to delay by cruel and bloody intervention the hour when France can step boldly forward to the future?"

Laval looked again at the marching German troops.

"It is the sad example of my own country which prompts me to warn the American people today——

"Reflect well before you throw yourself blindly into a great adventure and toward the same destiny as befell my nation which was hurled into a war already lost in advance, a nation which had only nine modern bombers.

"Why should the United States come into this war?

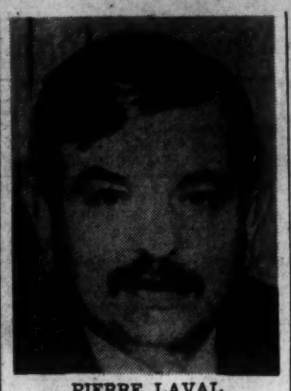
"I know, and like all my compatriots I am profoundly touched by, one of the major arguments advanced in favor of active American intervention: 'We must save France.'

"But I insist that such sentiment is fundamentally false and, if carried out, could only produce results atrociously prejudicial to the vital interests of France."

France, he said, is desperately anxious to avoid war with the United States because of the American people's "misunderstanding" of the collaboration negotiations with Germany and he hopes that the United States will accept a role for herself in the new European order.

It was Laval's first interview since his overthrow as French vice premier on December 13, when he was replaced by Admiral Jean Francois Darlan in the task of directing France's relations with Germany, with the United States and the rest of the world.

"I refuse to believe," said Laval, "that the United States Government has conceived any project for occupying Martinique, Dakar or other French possessions, shattering 180 unbroken years of French-American friendship."



PIERRE LAVAL

He then added quickly that France would resist with arms any such attacks on French territory, from whatever side they might come.

Laval retains all his tremendous self-assurance and shrewd manner, which prompted a German official to describe him to me as "a man to whom you go to borrow an egg and wind up giving him a chicken."

Laval declared that France's collapse can be traced directly "to the degeneration of French unity and strength" in three years of the Popular Front Government.

Pointing to German troops parading down the Champs Elysees, he said: "Every noon as that parade passes I say to myself, 'That, Leon Blum, is your work, the fruit of the incompatibility of your war policy and your 40-hour week which stimulated conflict among the classes and masses."

Laval expressed the same affection for the United States which he expressed when I accompanied him to Washington as a correspondent in October of 1931 after the Hoover moratorium.

"If I were 20 years old again I would not hesitate to go to the United States as an immigrant to make my fortune," he said today. "Who knows—I might have been elected to the Senate."

Laval is one of the few influential Frenchmen with whom I have spoken who has freed former United States Ambassador William Bullitt of blame for pushing France into the war—a too-easy shifting of responsibility which has been too tempting to many.

When I asked Laval how great a role he believed Americans had played informing France's decision to fight for the Polish Corridor, Laval replied:

"I know many important Americans. I know some who have been accused of giving us bad advice. I know them to be friends of France and incapable of deliberate injustice toward France. I saw them suffer as much as we suffered from our defeat. I know of their efforts since in favor of our women and children. They will always have my gratitude."

Fears Intervention By U. S. Will Delay 'Step Toward Future'

"If, in this hour of France's greatest distress, your flag were to be runup in place of our tricolor over distant French lands, what could the French people think of such a conception of honor?" he asked.

Laval disclosed that after President Roosevelt last November sent a message to Marhal Henri Philippe Petain criticized the French policy, Laval sent him a reply.

Following is that diplomatic note, which the United Press is able to publish for the first time, as it never was made public by either Washington or Vichy:

"The chief of the French State has received the message President Roosevelt sent him through the United States Charge d'Affaires. Animated by a desire to preserve the friendship which since the foundation of the American Republic has bound America to the French people, he abstains from referring to that portion of the Roosevelt message which might lead him to doubt the fair intentions of the American Government.

"To reply to the preoccupation of Mr. Roosevelt, he desires to affirm that the French government always kept its liberty of action and can only be astonished at any judgment as inexact as it is unjust that France would have sacrificed her freedom of action. The French government has declared that the French fleet never will be handed over and nothing can authorize the American Government to doubt today that solemn engagement. Mr. Roosevelt has spoken of operations against the British fleet. He has forgotten undoubtedly that in fact naval operations have occurred, but they were engaged by the British fleet in a most unexpected manner. Furthermore, England has adopted an anti-French position which the French people cannot tolerate.

"His Majesty's government supports Frenchmen in rebellion against their country, whose activities, thanks to the support of the British fleet and air force, have affected the unity of the French Empire. France and its government can give assurance never to participate in any unjustified attack against England but, conscious of her duties, France knows how to honorably respect its essential interests.

"The French government continues to be attached to the maintenance of the traditional friendship which binds our two countries and will in all circumstances endeavor to avoid misunderstandings or wrong interpretations such as those which doubtless led Mr. Roosevelt to send us his message."

Life Insurance Helped This Small Businessman

Your column of April 28 in the Register (writes D. J. of New Haven), about life insurance helping a technical engineer start his own business, impressed me a lot, because I had an experience along the same general lines.

About 20 years ago, I owned a small confectioner's store in this city. It was a store you couldn't do a great deal with, because it was in such a poor spot, and I wanted to buy a bigger store that was up for sale in a much better business spot.

The trouble was, the owner of the big store wanted $6,000 and I couldn't sell my store for more than $2,000. Where was I going to get the extra $4,000?

I tried everywhere. My record was good enough, but they all asked what would happen to their money if I died, and I had no answer for that.

One day I told my troubles to a life insurance agent. "I guess I'll have to give up," I said. "I don't know what to do."

"I'll tell you one thing you can do," he said. "Insure your life for the extra $4,000 and assign the policy to the fellow who lends you the money. If you die, he'll be covered. Someone ought to lend you the money on that basis."

Someone did—it was a bank—and I bought the big store. In the first year I made enough money to pay off the loan, and that gave me my insurance policy back clear of all encumbrances. Which was a good thing for me, because just a few years ago, when times were bad, I borrowed enough on that same policy to carry me through some bad money troubles.

Well, you hear a lot about life insurance helping widows and children who can't take care of themselves, and that's the biggest use for it, and ought to be, of course—but I think people ought to remember that life insurance can do other things, too, such as helping a small businessman like myself.

George V Class Ship Damaged, Germans Claim

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 25.—The German High Command, claiming new successes against the British by land and sea, announced today a battleship of the new King George V class was damaged and forced to retire in the North Atlantic battle in which the battle cruiser Hood was sunk yesterday.

The Germans at the same time said that their airborne invasion of Crete was continuing according to schedule with the western end of that Mediterranean island "solidly in German hands."

The daily war bulletin said the British battleship was hit and forced to retire from the battle of titans that saw the 35,000-ton German battleship Bismarck send the 42,100-ton Hood, pride of the Royal fleet, to the bottom off Iceland.

"German naval forces continue their operations without losses," the high command added tersely.

Two Ships of That Class

[The British are known to have completed and put into commission two ships of the 35,000-ton King George V class, the Prince of Wales and the King George V. The latter carried Lord Halifax, Ambassador to Washington, across the Atlantic to his post early this year.]

The high command said the British Mediterranean fleet had been driven from waters north of Crete and that operations were fulfilling the high command's timetable with additional air-borne reinforcements dropped yesterday.

In the Western air war, the Luftwaffe was said to have bombed airplane works and port facilities along the British South and Southeast coasts yesterday and last night and to have sunk two merchantmen totaling 3,500 tons. Two other large freighters were reported badly damaged.

The communique said two British planes were downed in R. A. F. attempts to attack Dutch and Norwegian costal areas.

Two British tanks were declared destroyed in the Tobruk sector of the North African front.

Father Welch Celebrates His Silver Jubilee

The Rev. Herbert Welch, O. P., yesterday celebrated the silver jubilee of his priesthood at a mass of thanksgiving at St. Dominic's Church, 515 Sixth Street Southwest, his "first field of labor."

Father Welch first came to St. Dominic's in 1916, after graduation from St. Charles College, Ellicott City, Md. He was born in Massachusetts in 1882 and worked in a Boston poultry market for 9 years before entering the priesthood.

After several years at St. Dominic's he entered missionary work and is now active in that field from Washington to Halifax. His station is at St. Catherine of Sienna's Church in New York City.

Assisting Father Welch at the mass yesterday were the Rev. George C. McGregor, O. P., professor at Aquinas College, Columbus, Ohio, and the Rev. Louis Springmann, both of whom served as altar boys under Father Welch during his stay at St. Dominic's.

Turkey Sees Foreign Policy 'Evolution'

By the Associated Press

Ankara, May 25.—With the Nation facing semiencirclement by the Axis armies of occupation, many Turkish political observers were inclined to agree today that the country's foreign policy "must undergo an evolution."

(Turkey has been a nonbelligerent ally of Britain since the war began and has received British financial and economic help.)

Passage from the Black sea of the first carloads of Nazi produced armaments was seen as the initial development in the changing situation for Turkey.

Meanwhile, responsible sources denied categorically foreign reports that the Axis had requested permission to move troops through Turkey. They said the question had never been raised.

The Turkish National Railroad has transported across Anatolia a test shipment of German-made military supplies consigned to Iraq, well-informed quarters revealed.

The shipment, although small, was considered an important precedent for heavy traffic should Iraq resistance remain unCrushed.

British Displeased

Iraq persuaded the Turkish government to grant railroad favors in return for assurances that Turkish imports, now halted at Basra and Bagdad, would be forwarded as quickly as possible.

British displeasure has been strongly evidenced in Ankara over Turkey's inability to choke off the stream of French surplus army equipment reported sent to Iraq by the Turko-Syrian rail line running mostly through Turkish territory.

Turks told the British that reciprocal agreements with Syria permit either country to make military use of the common route regardless of other international obligations.

Army Desires Lower Draft Age, Senators Disclose

By the United Press

Several Senators have disclosed that the War Department is anxious to restrict training of selectees to those in their early twenties, now that Army camps throughout the country have received their initial complements of older men to constitute an immediate reserve force.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy Selective Service director, wrote Speaker Sam Rayburn recently urging legislation to authorize deferment by age classes but the House Military Affairs Committee has delayed action on the request.

Congressional informants said that Selective Service officials have authority, through Administrative regulation, to restrict their selections to men under 26, but prefer Congressional sanction of such a move.

Meanwhile, Senator Capper (Republican), Kansas, said the Selective Service had advised him that local boards may defer induction of selectees if they are needed on farms during harvest seasons. The Kansas Senator made inquiries, he said, because of a threatened labor shortage, in his State.

Nazis Resume Heavy Raids On England

By the Associated Press

London, May 25.—The Luftwaffe returned to heavy assaults on England last night, inflicting numerous casualties and considerable property damage in a residential section of a west country town.

Several families were trapped in the wreckage of their homes, but rescue squads disregarded their own safety and worked right on through the raid. They were credited with holding down the fatalities.

The air ministry announced that British bombers attacking shipping off the Netherlands coast yesterday sank a vessel of about 2,500 tons and set another afire, leaving it listing to port. A third vessel was declared hit and probably sunk and still other Nazi craft strafed.

The British acknowledged the loss of one plane in these operations and said a Nazi fighter-bomber and two Messerschmitts 110 were shot down into the Channel today.

German planes flying separately appeared over the British Isles during the day but no bombs were reported dropped.

Warplanes were reported over a northeast coast district late Sunday night but no bombings were mentioned. Up to midnight there was little activity, elsewhere, and London, without an alert, passed its fifteenth bombless day.

London Maids Work in Shifts In Labor Shortage

London, (INS).—Owing to the shortage of maids resulting from women's call-up to factories, one maid now often works in shifts for various employers.

By thus sharing out their services maids earn up to $25 a week. Individual employers sometimes pay $5 or $6 a week for two hours' work a day. Many maids have husbands in the forces and receive a government allowance in addition to their pay.

Some of these new-style "dailies" go to work in one flat at 7:30 in the morning, get breakfast and clean up. Then they go to the second flat, make the beds, do the housework, and sometimes prepare lunch. A third two-hour shift can be worked in before three leaving the afternoon and evening free.

Troops to Be in Parade For 'Cumberland Day'

Cumberland, Md., May 25.—The military will not be lacking in the big parade here Wednesday in connection with the celebration of Baltimore & Ohio Employes Cumberland Day. Company G, formerly of the Maryland National Guard, inducted into Federal service February 3 and sent to Fort George G. Meade ebruary 21, will return as a unit to appear in the procession. More than 100 and officers will be in the group.

10,000 Arabs Riot, Looting City in Iraq

By the Associated Press

Ankara, May 25.—Ten thousand Arabs rioted and looted in Basra yesterday, a telegram to the Turkish Agricultural Bank said today amid reports that the pro-Axis government of Iraq was breaking up.

(First dispatches gave no indication as to whether the riot was for or aganist the Iraq government fighting Britain, nor did they say whether the British, who reported possession of the port early in the undeclared war, took steps to restore order.)

The telegram said the disturbances endangered $2,000,000 worth of American farm machinery which had been purchased for Turkish cooperatives and was on the Basra docks.

The families of Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani and some of his ministers were reported in flight after three weeks of war against the British.

Rashid Ali himself and his defense minister Nadji Shefket were reported to have reguested and received a visa to enter Turkey and they were expected by plane tomorrow.

There were rumors that several of Rashid Ali's generals had started a counter-revolution.

The wife, son and daughter of the anti-British premier, who a few short days ago was calling on Germany for aid against British troop movements across Iraq, arrived here at the Turkish capital along with the family of Rashid Ali's defense minister, Nedji Shefket.

Naji Suwaidi, Rashid Ali's finance minister, sent to Iran on "official business," took his family with him and Communications Minister Ali Mahmud also was understood to have reached Iran with his family.

The British say that German participation in the fight against the British in Iraq is almost negligible and that British forces have gained control of Dykes of the upper Euphrates, thus holding power to flood low-lying areas of southern Iraq if they wish.

Floods in northern Iraq were said to be holding up the British advance against Rashid Ali's scattered force.

Newark Fades Into Blackness In Raid Test

By International News Service

Newark, N. J., (Monday) May 26. Screaming sirens and factory whistles early this morning brought to Newark the Western Hemisphere's first "official" blackout.

As high Army, State and city officials joined in the proceedings as observers, this sprawling, industrial city with a population in excess of 500,000 became a black, hulking mass under a moonless sky.

Three airplanes roared across the sky as the city donned its sable cloak, adding further to the realism of the scene. Streets cars extinguished their lights and ground to a stop on their tracks, automobiles pulled up to curbs and into parking stations. The few buildings where all the lights were not turned off had their windows covered with black drapes.

All the city's street lights were turned off. Only on the wide concrete highways encircling Newark was there any illumination. From the air, the city seemed an ebon island, separated from neighboring areas by ribbons of light on its encircling highways. To the east, the blaze of lights that are New York glowed with increased brilliance.

The first "alert" was sounded at 11:45 p. m., as five powerful sirens and 24 factory whistles sent their eerie blasts screaming into the sky. A half hour later, at 12:15 a. m., the same whistles blared the real air raid alarm and the city immediately became a jet-black mass.

Pedestrians scurred from the inky streets as more than 1,800 air raid precaution wardens took up their posts, patroling streets in every block. Each warden had a list of all families living in his area and was responsible for their observation of blackout regulations.

All police and firemen in the city were on duty. A fireman was stationed at each fire box, while city and State police stopped all cars entering the city.

There were a few exceptions noted during the 15-minute blackout period. Sixteen trains passed through the city and three United States mail trucks went through city streets to make train connections. They made excellent time—there were no traffic and no traffic lights.

Similar blackouts have been held in several other cities, but this was called the first "official" blackout in this country, and the first in the East.

It was arranged and sponsored by the newly organized Newark Defense Council.

War Saddens Queen Mary's 74th Birthday

QUEEN MARY

By Russell Landstrom

London, May 25 (AP).—Queen Mother Mary comes to her seventy-fourth birthday tomorrow saddened by war and older wounds but with the certainty that she is more than ever firmly enthroned in the affections of her people.

Her austere manner which readily knows how to give way to smiles of human sympathy has never fooled the British. Their love for the Queen Mother is of a rare kind.

Her birthday will be passsd quietly in the country where many of her other days are devoted to rallying her fellow countrymen.

In dove gray coat and her familiar hats of the Victorian tradition, Queen Mary visits blitzed cities, rest centers and relief stations. She frequently sees the troops and follows all the movements of war. She is among the first to send messages of sympathy and cheer to those who have suffered bombings.

Recent damaging of part of Westminster Abbey moved her deeply and she dispatched a message to the dean.

The British say that Queen Mary has a gift for making and developing human contacts. This was shown in her visits to troop theaters, where she received enthusiastic applause.

Always an ardent playgoer—and one not easily shocked—she has extended this interest to the efforts of children by going to first nights given by village youngsters and to entertainments organized for war funds.

War has deepened the lines in her face, but otherwise her appearance is much the same. She conceals behind a beaming face the sorrows of two generations and the cares of majesty.

Soviet Derides Report She'll Lease Ukraine to Reich

By the Associated Press

Moscow, May 25.—Pravda, organ of the Communist Party, found it necessary today to brand as "political nonsense and an idiotic lie" a Berlin report attributed to a Finnish newspaper correspondent that Soviet Russia would lease her grain-rich Ukraine to Germany.

Pravda, which said the report came from a writer for the Helsinki Sanomat in the German capital, declared sarcastically:

"It is time that adult Finnish journalists stop representing the kindergarten and singing amusing nonsense in a falsetto voice. It is time for them to grow up and get wiser."

Pravda recalled a Russian nonsense verse, "the shellfish are cutting hay in the meadows wfth hammers," and warned readers not to repeat it in the presence of the Finnish correspondent lest it be published as a serious report.

British Fleet Driven to Port, Italy Claims

By the Associated Press

Rome, May 25.—Italy, laying claim to a great share in Axis successes against British seapower in the Mediterranean and Atlantic, declared today that the British fleet in the Battle of Crete had been driven back to its bases.

Italian claims included:

1. Three merchant ships, totaling 21,000 tons, including a large tanker, sunk in Atlantic by submarine.

2. Submarine also scored torpedo hit on a British warship—"presumably a cruiser."

3. Light naval forces sank allied submarine attempting attack on Italian convoy in central Mediterranean.

Destroyer Lost

The Italian high command acknowledged loss of a destroyer and a torpedoboat in eastern Mediterranean action but said the crews were "almost entirely saved."

Naval air forces, collaborating with the Germans, have been in action since the night of May 19, a communique said in the first official Italian mention of the Battle of Crete.

"Bombers, torpedo-launching planes, pursuit and reconnaissance planes are flying without pause.

Column Gives Up in Ethiopia

"Land objectives on the Island of Crete were repeatedly bombed. Numerous attacks were carried out against British naval units which had been brought up for protection of the island.

"The English fleet has been forced to retire to its bases on account of heavy losses inflicted by Axis forces."

There was no report from North Africa but in Ethiopia an isolated column surrendered in the Amara district, about 63 miles west of Addis Ababa. The government said the column was without provisions and "laid down its arms with honor after long and courageous resistance."

A Herndon, Va., man was killed and three companions were hurt last night when their auto failed to make a curve and turned over on the Leesburg Pike, at Andrew Chapel, Fairfax County.

The dead man was John O'Meara, 55, Route 2, Herndon.

Suffolk, Va., May 25 (AP).—Two persons, one of them from Alexandria, were killed and two others injured in a collision of two automobiles 3 miles east of Magnolia on the Norfolk-Suffolk Highway today.

State Trooper W. S. Dameron listed the dead as:

J. M. Barnhill, 37, Alexandria, and James Robert Holland, of Norfolk.

Peace Is First Wish Of New Mexico Coeds

Albuquerque, N. Mex. (U.P.).—University of New Mexico coeds rank peace for the United States just one notch above their desire for a husband.

A test of 75 campus girls showed that they agreed the United States should remain in its own back yard and at the same time carry a big stick in the war situation."

They were "resigned" to seeing the boy friend go to the Army and wouldn't mind being drafted for industry themselves.

Bill Proposes Oak Trees To Line Florida Roads

Tallahassee, Fla. (U.P.).—Florida would become a veritable forest of oak trees if a bill introduced by St. Elmo Acosta, Jacksonville, is enacted by the Florida Legislature now in session.

The Acosta measure would require the county commissioners of each of Florida's 67 counties to plant 1,000 live oak or water oak trees along the highways annually. The saplings would be furnished by the State nursery.

President Urged to Take Strong Stand fairs Committee, but the number cannot be learned until the House meets today.

Chairman Bloom (New York), of the Foreign Affairs Committee, declared it would be virtually impossible to repeal all of the Neutrality Act, since such provisions as those for munitions export control, and regulation of funds' solicitation for use aboard would require retention. He and Chairman George, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said no request for alteration of the measure had come from the Administration, despite appeals by Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of Navy Knox for changes that would reestablish the doctrine of freedom of the seas for American shipping.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, proposed that the United States immediately transfer a substantial number of war vessels to the British or Canadan navies for use in North Atlantic convoy service. He told the Associated Press "it would be much better to use some of our fleet now, if we can turn the tide with it, than to keep it intact and have to fight Hitler by ourselves if Great Britain falls.

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, in a radio talk predicted the Nazis would capture Crete, then "spill over" into Africa, while "submarine sharks will spawn at Dakar," enabling Hitler to control the 1,500 miles of ocean between Africa and South America.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, on a Southwest speaking tour said Senator Wheeler and Charles A. Lindbergh "have succeeded only in giving aid and comfort to Hitler" in their opposition to Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policies.

Little Inkling Given

The White House has let it be known that Mr. Roosevelt's speech "will not be pleasing to opponents of democracy whether at home or abroad" but has given no further inkling of its nature.

Debate of foreign issues in the Senate and possibly in the House may be engaged in before the President's talk, though leaders are planning brief sessions. The Senate is expected to be in session only a short time and then will recess until Thursday. The House, however, is to discuss today the bill extending the President's monetary powers and tomorrow will receive the conference report on legislation authorizing requisitioning of idle foreign ships in American ports. Either might touch off debate on foreign affairs.

Well-Known Names Listed

The statement calling for "strong action, even armed action" was issued by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, and the first signers were Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former Minister to Norway, and Lewis W. Douglas, now president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. Others signers included:

J. P. Morgan, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, mother of Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh; Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti of New York; Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania; Actress Helen Hayes; Mark Ethridge, Louisville, Ky., editor; Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Robert C. Clothier, president of Rutgers University Henry Seidel Canby, critic; Van Wyck Brooks, author, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, woman suffrage leader.

The appeal to the President said:

"The dictators have extended their world war and world revolution from continent to continent—farther and farther out into the Atlantic Ocean—nearer and nearer to the lifeline of the Western Hemisphere. With their propagandists and saboteurs they have begun their invasion of this hemisphere.

"The challenge is inescapable. We cannot meet it with mere words nor with mere dollars. We know that strong action, even armed action, entailing greater sacrifices, will be required of us. . ."

Mass Meeting Friday

The antiwar Congress will open with a mass meeting at Turner's Arena Friday evening. A second plenary session will be held in the Press Club Auditorium and an open-air memorial service in the Sylvan Theater Sunday afternoon. Fear of Losing Market Held Obstacle to Cheaper Milk has no work at all and therefore no income from which to buy any milk.

A person on the relief rolls is one who is entirely on the public purse, and it is from the public purse that the major cost of supplying 5-cent milk is met.

Those who have retained the initiative and independence to be responsible for their own welfare, no matter how pitifully small their income, must pay the same price for milk as those with money in the bank.

The only conclusion from the latter fact is that the producers are afraid that the market for higher-priced milk will be cut down if these needy persons—including nursing mothers, infants and invalids—are allowed to buy milk at a price they may be able to pay.

The fact that social workers and welfare agencies have proved that many such families go without milk entirely, because they cannot pay the higher price, is totally ignored.

Thus the situation becomes one in which public need exists, and the means for meeting it exists, but in which a complete stalemate is caused because producers and distributors of milk feel that they have to consider all suggested solutions purely on the basis of fancied profit and loss. Broad social and humane considerations are allowed to fall by the way.

During the current investigation of the milk situation in Washington, The Post has found that there exists a need for 1-cent milk among Washington school children, and pre-school children, and for 5 cents milk among Washington's needy families. It has found also that a sufficient supply of surplus milk exists to fill these needs, and that the Congress has set up legislation through which such a widened program can be financed. New York and other large cities have moved ahead to solve the problem in the simple, humane way. Washington hesitates. Why?

As the Department of Agriculture has referred the problem concerning 5-cent milk back to the attitude of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association, an effort was made last week to procure from them the answer to that, "Why?"

Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the association, and its virtual boss, told a reporter for The Post that he had nothing to say, and wouldn't answer any questions.

It remains to be seen whether the question of making surplus milk available to Washingtonians who need it, and need it at a time when nutritionists are calling attention to the relation of an adequate diet to adequate defense morale, will be answered in the days to come.

bottles daily, Chestnut Farms is said to be losing money on the contract.

Unless the volume is increased through wideing the class of those eligible to buy the surplus milk, bidding on a new contract may introduce another peril: there may be no bidding, and thus no distribution at all.

One reason the answer is important is that unless the distribution of such milk is widened in the days ahead, it may have to be abandoned altogether.

At present Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase dairy holds the contract for delivering the milk to the 11 scattered stations where the limited class of eligibles must go to buy it. It gets 3 cents for each quart handled, which is paid out of District relief funds. The Surplus Marketing Administration pays for the milk itself, with the producer receiving an average of 5 cents a quart.

This delivery contract will expire June 30. With sales as low as they are under the restricted program, averaging about 3,000 gaged on $500,000,000 worth of defense contracts, have been kept from their work by what national labor leaders have called an outlaw strike by the machinists.

Here the Senate defense investigating committee, headed by Senator Truman, of Missouri, awaited the appearance of three machinist union officials to testify on the strike.

Packard Tieup Threatened

A strike against the Packard Motor Car Co., at Detroit, was threatened to enforce a demand by the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers for a pay raise of 10 cents an hour. The union local was said to have voted to authorize filing of the statutory five-day notice of intent to strike. About 9,500 are employed there.

In a statement issued at Winchester, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, renewed his attack on Secretary of Labor Perkins, and called on President Roosevelt to declare in his address tomorrow night that "defense strikes must stop."

"'Our Government can no longer compromise in this vital issue without imperiling our national safety to a most dangerous degree," he said. "The disastrous effect of such strikes must no longer be minimized by the Administration. . . .

"Is Miss Perkins to be retained in the face of her proven inadequacy? Is the Mediation Board to have power to enforce its decisions? Are foreign and subversive elements, as described by the Assistant Secretary of Navy, to be permitted to continue to sabotage our preparedness efforts? Is John L. Lewis bigger and more powerful than the United States Government?

Up to Roosevelt, He Says

"The only man who can answer these questions and speak for our Government is Franklin D. Roosevelt, our President. . . . Let Mr. Roosevelt say tomorrow night: 'Defense strikes must stop.' They will stop, as in doing so he will speak in the majesty of our Republic, and with the support of an overwhelming majority of our citizens.

"If our Nation is to be united in this crisis in our history, we must first be united at home, and united to control by whatever strong measures as may be necessary those who would wilfully obstruct our program of preparedness to preserve our security."

Christ Church To Receive New Rector

Christ Episcopal Church, Georgetown, where Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star-Spangled Banner," was a vestryman, soon will have a new rector—the Rev. Peyton R. Williams.

It was announced from the pulpit of the church, at Thirty-first and O Streets Northwest, during yesterday morning's services that Mr. Williams, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Arlington, Va., had accepted the pulpit call, effective September 1.

Meanwhile, Mr. Williams was formally presenting his resignation to St. Mary's worshipers at Twenty-sixth Street North and Glebe Road.

Conducting the services at Christ Church was Dr. J. Freeland Peter, former canon of the Washington Cathedral, and ad interim rector since the resignation of the Rev. J. Gillespie Armstrong. The latter is rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Ardmore, Pa.

Mr. Williams is a native of Richmond, Va., where he attended St. Christopher's School, and later the Woodberry Forest School at Orange, Va.

He received a B. A. degree from the University of Virginia in 1930, and, following a year's teaching at Woodberry School, entered the Episcopal Theological Seminary, at Alexandria, Va. There he received a B. D. degree in 1934.

He then served for two years as curate at St. John's Church, Westbury, Conn., and in 1936 became rector of St. John's Church, McLean, Va., and St. Mary's, Arlington. When St. Mary's was established as an independent parish in 1940, he became its rector. He is vice chairman of the Arlington Red Cross and chairman of the Diocesan Board of Christian Education.

wheat or enriched."

One-third of people in the United States, Dr. Parran said, are getting a "very poor" diet and not more than one-fourth are receiving a "diet which could be called good." The Nation's efficiency, he said, is impaired "at least 25 per cent by inadequate or improper diet.

He urged that dried skimmed milk be declared a strategic material and be placed on the priority lists in aid to Britain to fill the need for animal proteins.

Nazis Collecting Yeast

Asked from the floor if the Germans "have any secrets about food we don't know," Dr. Parran replied that information is that the Germans are collecting quantities of yeast and "certainly are making full use of the new nutritional knowledge." He said the Germans have large stores of vitamin C, so badly needed in the last war, and that they are making use of soybeans and dried skimmed milk in place of meat.

The National Nutritional Conference, opening today at the Mayflower Hotel, will attract 700 leaders in medicine, public health and nutrition, it has been estimated. All sessions will be held at the Mayflower except that tonight, which will be at the Departmental Auditorium, Fourteenth Street and Constitution Avenue.

The aim of the conference is similar to that of the first World War when former President Herbert Hoover organized the first nation-wide effort to produce more food and to conserve every ounce possible. The conference is to work out methods of seeing that the diets of 30,000,000 families are adequate in both quantity and food value.

M. L. Wilson, director of extension of the Department of Agriculture and chairman of the committee, said the conference would attempt to work out a specific program of economic and agricultural policy to use the farm resources of the country to the fullest extent in providing proper nutrition for the entire population.

Rabbit Turns Tables—It Chases Dog

Tacoma, Wash. (AP).—Peter Rabbit, a 10-year-old carrot and grass eater owned by Clifford Bach of Tacoma, chases dogs.

He patrols Bach's back yard and if a stray dog so much as puts his nose through the fence, Peter backs up and sprays gravel in his face, then tosses a blow with his hind-kickers. Pete's defense, if the going gets tough, is to crawl into a bramble bush.

Mrs. Bach had to give a passer-by a glass of water one day when he saw the rabbit chasing a dog.

200 to Walk Out At Cafeteria Here, Union Agent Says

One strike loomed here this morning, further darkening the labor picture in Washington and at Indianhead, Md.

Jack Mink, business agent of Local 471, United Cafeteria Employes of the C. I. O., announced that 200 employes at the S. & W. Cafeteria would walk out "any time beginning Monday morning." His statement followed the breakdown of negotiations between management and employes on Saturday. No date had been set last night for further conferences on dispute.

The Federal Works Agency was believed still attempting to negotiate the Indianhead strike, although Ray C. Kirkpatrick, labor adviser to the agency charged with the job of negotiating, has refused to make any statement on the progress of hearings since the walkout last Tuesday. Nearly 600 A. F. of L. workmen are out in protest over the hiring of C. I. O. unionists on defense housing projects.

Federal Conciliator Frank J. Sheehan will preside at a conference of management and employes of the Arnold Bus Co. at 3:15 p. m. today at the Labor Department. The company's 130 organized drivers and servicemen voted Friday to stay at their jobs at least until today's conference.

Manufacturer Group Opposes Price Freezing

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 25.—The executive committee of the National Association of Manufacturers said today that "freezing by law the prices of all goods and services would put consumers, employers and employes in a strait-jacket."

"However," the committee said in a report to the association's directors, "if the Government should find that there are unfair and harmful price increases in a certain industry producing products vital to the national defense program, and that the solution requires the fixing of maximum prices, then such controls should be confined to these and related products.

"Freezing by law the prices of all goods, services, subcontract costs as related to prime costs, rents, interest rates and labor rates would be inconsistent with the free economy and the entire American system, and would result in inflexibility, which would slow down production.

"Such freezing would require the setting up of supervisory controls by Government which would be cumbersome, costly and create confusion and uncertainty."

The committee recommended that wage increases during the defense period should be regarded as supplemental compensation which would not become a part of the permanent wage structure and "thus make more difficult the problems of post-defense reconstruction."

William S. Knudsen, director general of the Office of Production Management, and Leon Henderson, director of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, are scheduled to address more than 2,000 Midwest manufacturers at a "conference on preparedness" tomorrow.

Liberties Union To Contest Foreign Mail 'Censoring'

New York, May 25 (AP).—The American Civil Liberties Union announced today it would contest in the courts of the District of Columbia the Postoffice Department's "intolerable consorship" of foreign mail.

The A. C. L. U. said that since January postal officials, acting under a ruling by United States Attorney General Jackson that the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938 applied outside the United States as well as in it, had been destroying disapproved literature, chiefly from Russia, Germany and Japan.

"This is objectionable," a statement by the A. C. L. U. continued, "not because it interferes with the right of foreigners to disseminate propaganda, but because it interferes with the right of Americans to receive and rea danything they please."

Foot Reflector Designed For Pedestrian Safety

Miami, Fla. (U.P.).—Two inventions designed for the protection of pedestrians have made their appearance on the streets here.

The other safety device, patented by Mrs. C. A. McKinley, of Miami, is a reflector attached to a rubber band and worn on the shoes of cyclists and pedestrians on the streets after dark.

Maryland U. To Form Army Flying Unit

Maryland University has been designated by the War Department as one of the colleges where flying units are to be recruited. Maj. John G. Fowler, of Langley Field, Va., will arrive at the university today to begin recruiting students.

The unit will be known as the Maryland University Flying Unit. Members will be trained together and will be assigned as a collegiate unit in the air corps.

Maj. Fowler will visit the university for two weeks discussing enlistment in the training unit with students. He will attend luncheons at the various fraternity houses and other student centers and confer with the students.

It is necessary that at least 20 students agree to take the training course leading to commissions as pilots in the Air Corps. The students must have had at least two years of college and be able to pass the physical tests. Flying experience is not necessary.

Notice of the designation of the Maryland University Flying Unit was received late Saturday by college authorities.

Fight Opens Today on Extending Roosevelt Money Powers

By Cecil B. Dickson
International News Service Staff Writer

Use of $1,800,000,000 now lying idle in the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund to help meet defense costs was proposed yesterday on the eve of the House battle on extending President Roosevelt's power to devalue the dollar for two years.

Republicans, led by Representative Andresen of Minnesota, served notice in a minority report they would fight to freeze the price of gold at $35 an ounce and to reduce the exchange stabilization fund to $200,000,000.

Seizing upon Secretary Morgenthau's statement before the House Coinage Committee that the Treasury had found $200,000,000 sufficient for stabilization operations, the Republicans declared:

"In effect the remaining $1,800,000,000 in the exchange stabilization fund is lying idle in the Treasury at the very time when taxes on the American people are being greatly increased for defense purposes."

They referred to the Treasury's $3,500,000,000 tax program before the House Ways and Means Committee, which would take $1,500,000,000 from individuals, $1,200,000,000 from corporations and $800,000,0000 in excise taxes on consumption items.

Opponents of the Treasury's excess profits taxes on corporations are to be heard tomorrow, including S. Clay Williams, head of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.; H. B. Fernald, of the American Mining Congress, and Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, of the Cotton Textile Institute.

Pointing out that the idle $1,800,000,000 costs taxpayers $45,000,000 annually in interest, Representative Andresen said this fund should be used to reduce Federal borrowing from banks, which, he asserted, is inflationary.

"The Secretary of the Treasury asserts that the money in this account is a 'nest egg' being held in trust for the benefit of the American people as a whole and that the money should be used for a worthy purpose," Andresen's minority report on the bill said.

"There can be no more worthy purpose, benefiting the whole Nation, than financing national defense. Certainly if the money in this fund is used for this purpose now it will remove all temptation to use it for a less worthy cause on some unforeseen future occasion."

Attacking President Roosevelt's request to extend his dollar devaluation power, the Republicans noted that Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board has said "the power to further devalue the dollar in terms of gold is no longer necessary or desirable and should be permitted to lapse," because of its inflationary potentialities.

They also cited that Secretary Morgenthau gave the committee assurances that President Roosevelt would not use the power to devalue the dollar and declared:

"Our study reveals but two possible reasons why the Administration could desire to have this power continued. First, despite its repeated disavowals, the Administration could wish to have this power available so that it might finance national defense by again clipping the coin. Certainly the Administration's fight to continue the existence of this power indicates that it means to use it.

"This brings us logically to the second reason: That is because it wants power for the sake of having power. The President asserts he needs this power because he cannot predict the future. On the basis of this argument it could as logically be argued that the President could be trusted with all the power bestowed or reserved by the Constitution upon the Congress, the courts, and to the States and the people.

"Such a course pursued to its limits would surrender constitutional government and establish totalitarianism."

Willkie Hopes Roosevelt Chat Will Unify America in Crisis

New York, May 25 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie said today he hoped that President Roosevelt's radio address Tuesday night would unite America.

In a brief radio talk over Station WMCA from a reviewing stand in Columbus Circle, where he watched a parade sponsored by the United China Relief, of which he is a national director, Willkie, the 1940 Republican Presidential candidate, said he hoped the President would:

"Give a forthright, courageous and revealing message that will unite Americans, lead to a composing of the differences among our citizens, unite us in a common cause, and serve notice to totalitarian rulers everywhere that America intends to help stop aggressor powers and totalitarianism."

Willkie said that if China lost its struggle, "then one of our own fronts against totalitarianism will have collapsed."

"We must not permit that," he said. "The American people must give all the encouragement and all the real support they can to the people of the great Democratic Chinese nation."

Later, in addressing an audience that gathered when the parade ended, Willkie said:

"This is no time to quarrel over trivialities when the world is on fire. Heaven knows I have criticized the Administration. When I am helping to put out a fire, I am not going to stand around and quarrel with the fire chief even though I previously was opposed to him."

D. C. Boy Fugitive Admits Burglary

A 17-year-old boy, fugitive from the Industrial Home School, yesterday admtited breaking into the International Distributing Co., 917 E Street Northwest, shortly after a burglar alarm at the palce brought police to the scene.

He was arrested in the building and said he broke through a window in the rear of the second floor of the building. The company, managed by Stanley Korman, of 4550 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, is a wholesale whiskey distributing company.

17 States Act In Defense Power Crisis

Power capacities of 17 States have been mobilized to meet defense needs in the Southeast in the face of an unprecedented drought, the Power Commission revealed yesterday.

The coordination of power supply, on a scale larger than ever before attempted, was arranged at a conference here May 19, Chairman Leland Olds of the commission announced. Generating facilities of 18 large systems are being united "into a combined effort to assure continuous power supply for defense production," he said.

The emergency "resulted from an unprecedented drought occurring simultaneously with the rapid growth of defense production," his statement added.

"With rainfall in the area at only 50 per cent of normal, the flow of the rivers is to date less than any year of record. Without the extraordinary steps now under way the deficiency of electricity to carry essential loads threatened to reach a total of 1,000,000,000 kilowatt hours before the end of the year."

Affects Vital Industries

Defense industries which have been expanding in the Southeast include those producing aluminum, ferro-alloys, steel and important chemicals.

Olds said that the TVA, with the cooperation of a number of private systems, "has been straining every resource to make good this deficiency in dependable power, but the situation has become so serious on account of lack of rainfall that the cooperation of other systems in 17 States was necessary to assure the necessary energy without serious threat to continuity of power supply for other loads."

Systems cooperating are Carolina Power and Light, Duke Power, South Carolina Power, South Carolina Electric and Gas, Lexington Water Power, Georgia Power, Alabama Power, Gulf Power, Mississippi Power, TVA, Arkansas Power and Light, Louisiana Power and Light, New Orleans Public Service, Gulf States Utilities, Southwestern Gas and Electric, American Gas and Electric and Mississippi Power and Light.

Half of Needs Supplied

States in which electric energy thus is being obtained include Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

More than half of the needed electricity already has been supplied, Olds said, through better use of every generating station in the region.

He said that the present Southeast emergency "is on the road to being met without serious interruption of essential power supply," but that the experience has shown "the importance of long-range planning to assure adequate generating capacity" and "the importance of early provision for stronger transmission interconnections between systems and areas."

Polish Relief Head Urges Food Aid Plan

Maurice Pate, president of the Commission for Polish Relief, yesterday visualized the work of his organization which has raised $1,500,000 to feed 50,000 children in German-occupied Poland as a "successful experiment" with a method whereby the peoples of other conquered countries might be fed by neutral America.

Veteran of relief work in Belgium and Poland under Herbert Hoover during and after the first World War, Pate has served as head of the Polish relief organization since its founding in 1939. He discussed the organization's work with reporters following an address to the Polish American Council at the Mayflower Hotel.

Since the collapse of France the commission has been purchasing food for Polish children in neutral countries, chiefly Russia, he said.

"Missions from other occupied countries are pounding at the doors in Moscow trying to get food for their people," he said. "The commission has been successful in Moscow probably in reciprocity for the aid the United States gave the Russian people in the famine of 20 years ago."

The commission is the only American relief agency operating in an occupied country, he pointed out.

With more than 5,000,000 pounds of foodstuffs having been shipped since the beginning of the war, the commission has had losses of less than one-half of 1 per cent, Pate said. "And that's less than the average loss on domestic shipping in this country," he added.

"Our work in Poland is a small laboratory for a system of distribution in an occupied country. It shows that food can be distributed under neutral control."

Two Americans are in charge of the purchasing of supplies for the Polish relief organization. The actual distribution and handling in Polish orphanages and schools are under neutral American observation.

New Alexandria Bus Rout Proposed

The Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transit Co. will ask permission to establish a new route serving residents of the naval housing development on King Street Road and nearby suburbs, at a hearing of the State Corporation Commission Tuesday morning.

Beverly May, general manager, said the company plans to operate its buses on a route beginning at the intersection of King Street Road and Scroggin Road, proceeding along Scroggin Road to Braddock Road, left to Seminary Drive, and along Seminary Drive to Army-Navy Drive. The proposed route, he said, would provide transportation facilities for an estimated 300 families soon to occupy the naval development, and residents of other suburban areas which have no regular bus service.

AIRPORT LUXURY SPOT. The new Washington Airport is to have a huge and luxurious restaurant in keeping with its international importance. It will cost a mint of money, probably around a couple of hundred thousand dollars, and will be promoted by Texas interests. While not so many details are available, we hear the new restaurant will bear a family resemblance to the French Pavilion at the World's Fair and will be opened around July 1. Chef Claude Jarrin, prominent in the Societe d'Escoffier and formerly of the Raleigh Hotel, will superintend the cuisine. And we wouldn't be a bit surprised if the person who'll greet you at the door turns out to be one of Washington's favorite night spot managers.

This week's star events will be the opening of the Shoreham Terrace on Wednesday and the summer debut of the Starlight Roof on Thursday. Barnee, of the Shoreham, fresh back from Hollywood is whipping up a frothy musical program for the Terrace. The Starlight Roof opening brings a shining Manhattan musical setup to town—Dick Wilson and his Society orchestra.

LA NINA. Madrillon's new Porto Rican warbler, Nina Blanco, is vivacious, lovely and dramatic. Her rich soprano voice will send little chills chasing up and down your back. And when she sings, she sings all over,—with her shoulders and torso as well as her vocal chords. Before coming to Washington, Nina appeared at El Gaucho, New York's oldest Spanish restaurant, also at the Spanish Theater. . . Virginia Sothern, Madrillon's cute singer of American songs, went to see "Ziegfeld Girl" the other day, was so affected by Lana Turner's fall that she took a tumble in the aisle and sprained an ankle.

LOVE BIRDS AND ACROBATS will figure in Lotus' new "Struttin' Revue," opening today. Powell and Knox, who head the show, are versatile troupers who combine music with acrobatics, top off their act with a "bird flirtation" of the type they did in the Alice Faye picture, "You're a Sweetheart." They have also appeared on the

whose Society Orchestra will be on the bandstand at the Thursday opening of the Starlight Roof

Rudy Vallee radio hour any number of times. New, too, at Lotus will be Bryant, Rains and Young, adagioteers.

MARCHE MILITAIRE. Pat Duffy, assistant manager of the Hamilton Hotel, starts for camp today. A splendificent going-away party was tossed for him in the Rainbow Room. Harry Chase, day manager of the Plymouth, has just finished filling out his questionnaire, says it reminds him of an income tax blank because it's so different. . . Current questionnaire filler-outers at the Hi Hat are bassist Hardy Franks and pianist Sandy Ross of Jimmy Summerville's Four M's and assistant manager Dennis Calvert. . . Harold Stern, musical director of "Helzapoppin," dropped into Mayfair lately to visit with his old friends, Harry Mitchell and his Chordsmen. Maestro Stern holds a reserve commission, expects to get into khaki any day.

Dick Leith, trombonist with Paul Kain's Glen Echo band, is a devout disciple of Lin Yutang, the great Chinese philosopher. Now what would Confucius say about that?

CONCERT IN CIRO'S. Evelyn Scott, delightful and amusing young violinist at Ciro's Famous Village, has played many concerts in Washington at the Arts Club and other places. She's known Mayor Ciro since the days when he ran Ciro's Casino at Chesapeake Beach and she and other small tykes used to sit on the front steps. "If we parked long enough on the Casino steps," says Evelyn, "the Mayor always gave us a lollypop apiece to get up and go away."

TRADE IN HATS. The Clair Rae Girls are going to do a new "hat dance" in the Casino Royal revue starting today. As we understand it, they trade sombreros in strictly jive tempo. Dancers Spencer and Foreman are held over, and there'll be added vaudeville acts.

TUNE TRICKSTERS. Joe Collins, leader of the Mad Hatters in the Neptune Room, likes to take old tunes and give them a good facelift. Listen to his jive version of "Home on the Range" . . . Those bright young fellows, Byron Henry, Sid Foster and Pat Murphy, all of Jack Coffey's band, both write and perform the musical skits presented in the Metronome Room . . . Buddy Harmon, of Dick Koons' Mayflower Lounge orchestra, holds our town's long-distance singing record. He's been in the Lounge since it was opened y'ars ago . . . Pete Macias, of the Lounge Riviera, has been Washington society's pet bandsman for as long as we can remember. But he doesn't read a note of music. "I don't like to be bothered with details," says Pete . . . Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, makes it a habit to be away out in front with song hits before they're hits. Right now she's singing the numbers from "The Great Broadcast" that will soon arrive on Washington picture screens.

DeLloyd McKaye, sepia star of Paul Young's, has fond memories of Paris. When she appeared there her dressing room was kept full of flowers sent by Hubert Julian, the "Black Eagle of Harlem." La! La!

HITHER AND AROUND. Olmsted's Grill has the nicest idea of hospitality. At tables near the door the parting guest will find not only mints and matches, but a big tray of loose cigarets of various brands. . . . Richard McNeil, young artist who did the alluring murals at the Silver Fox, is a brother-in-law to the late Spencer Tupman, whom middle-aged Washingtonians will remember as maestro at Le Paradis in its hey-day . . . Dick Ashby, owner of Dick's Grill, tells us that muskrat is very delicious eating if prepared according to any good recipe for rabbit. He also approves of raccoon. But muskrat and coon are not going on the Dick's Grill menu. Dick says that if he gets any of these animiles he'll eat 'em himself.

PALL MALL CLIMATE. New cooling units are being installed in the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. They've planned to cope with Washington weather at its hottest, keep Pall Mall at an even Maytime temperature.

Poor Lighting Held to Cause Vision Defects

Hartford, Conn. (U.P.).—Defective eyesight—largely due to poor lighting in homes and classrooms—has resulted in more than 20 per cent of eligible American youths being barred from the Nation's armed forces, it was reported here at a conference of illuminating engineers.

Addressing delegates to the Northeastern Regional Conference of the Illuminating Engineering Society, O. P. Cleaver, lighting engineer for the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., said inadequate and misplaced lighting is helping create a "nation of visual misfits."

"Selective Service boards throughout the country are turning away 9 per cent of all draftees because of eyesight defects," Cleaver declared. "Another 13 per cent of those passed by local boards later are rejected by Army medical examiners for the same reason."

Toy Lending Service Opened in Fort Worth

Fort Worth, Tex. (U.P.). — The strangest title listed on the public pay roll here is "toyrarian."

Mrs. Ben Hur acts as the "toyrarian." A "toyrarian" serves the same capacity in connection with toys as a librarian does in connection with books.

The city recreation department recently innovated a Toy Loan Center. Children may borrow toys for a seven or 15-day period. They must return the toys promptly and in good condition.

Army Radio Hams to Stand By All Summer

Because of the growing war crisis, the 2,400 "hams" in the Army Amateur Radio system will stay by their instruments throughout the summer instead of closing their season on the last Monday in May, as is customary, the War Department announced yesterday.

"With all other phases of defense gaining momentum from day to day," the department said it would intensify its program, and announced for June 2 a contest to determine what amateur operator can make the most contacts with other operators affiliated with the Army.

The Signal Corps' program for the amateurs is designed to develop traffic handling ability and operating speed, and to instruct the young operators in Army procedure. "Then," the department said, "if their services are required in an emergency, they can swing into action immediately."

In addition, the amateurs are transmitting, free of charge, messages for many of the hundreds of thousands of men in training camps. They relayed more than 500 Mother's Day messages, in many cases over great distances.

The Department told of one officer in the deep South who was ordered to duty at Kodiak, Alaska, in midwinter. Through an Army station in Atlanta, he sent a message asking whether Kodiak had a place in which he, his wife and four children could live. An Army amateur at Astoria, Oreg., relayed the message to Kodiak and sent back the reply to Atlanta.

A "buck private" at Schofield Barricks, Honolulu, "kept his sweetheart in Indianapolis informed of his progress. Each time he got a promotion he sent her a radio message. Finally, when he was promoted to sergeant, he radioed he had one more rung to climb and then he would send for her."

"One of the oddest messages relayed on the Army's net," the department continued, "was a civilian's polite 100-word rejection of a leap-year proposal.

"In a recent message from Fort Sill, Okla., an Army couple broadcast over the Army net to several of their friends in other parts of the country that 'It is a nine-pound boy.'"

The Birthday of a New World

The national nutrition conference called by the President meets in Washington today. Mark this date. History will. No more important assemblage has taken place on the American continent than this assemblage promises to be.

This conference will be a report to the nation on the nutritional state of the nation and what to do about it. This conference will seek ways to wipe out the half-health that comes from poor nutrition and that means half success and half happiness for millions and millions of Americans.

The gigantic discoveries of nutritional scientists in the past forty years will now be applied in solemn earnest. They will be applied, not to the meager purpose of keeping badly nourished people going, but to the dynamic purpose of building a nation of buoyantly healthy people, the first national family of healthy people the world has ever known.

This conference springs from the national purpose not only to build stronger health into the national defense, but to build this buoyant national health into our people as their heritage, down through the years of peace.

This is an enormous task. But the means to do it are enormous. This conference springs from the will and the resources of government, science and industry in America, the constructive core of the nation.

Utilizing the cooperation of the new technique of nutritional chemistry, the bread industry and the flour industry are already far along the road to making a new staff of life for Americans. Already we have fortified with vitamins and iron, the wheat foods from which the American people get one-quarter of their food energy.

Today, all over the country, you can buy enriched flour and enriched bread. This means white flour and white bread, and slightly darker flour and bread, enriched with iron and two vitamins natural to whole wheat.

In all those widespread nutritional areas where the wheat vitamins are deficient, there is bound to be an upsurge of health from the use of enriched flour and breads. In the words of Surgeon General Thomas Parran, "Food will build a new America."

No concept of the American way of life could claim our loyalty that did not include the well-being of the people to the utmost degree possible to our economic system. This nutrition conference will be a milestone on the road toward the American dream of a richer, fuller, life for all.

It will mark the birthday of a new world, a world where buoyant health will be the heritage of its citizens. To the making of this world we dedicate our will and our resources.

The demand of the five railway brotherhoods for an increase of 30 per cent in basic rates of pay would add from $168,000,000 to $200,000,000 to the carriers' wage bill. The smaller estimate is that of the unions. The larger is that of the Association of American Railroads. But either sum would mean a staggering addition to operating costs at a time, moreover, when the roads are just beginning to show modest rates of return on their capital investment. Moreover, such increases to the brotherhoods would be only a beginning. Nontransportation employes would certainly follow with similar demands, and the result might well be to add as much as $600,000,000 to the operating side of the ledger. That would leave the roads as bare as a bone. During the first three months of the current year the net operating income of the roads amounted to little more than $200,000,000 before payment of fixed interest charges. This is a rate of return just above 4 per cent on their investment. Accession to the unions' demand, therefore, would mean vanished dividends and earnings far below the amounts required to cover interest on bonds.

If the railroads were private concerns able at will to increase the price of what they had to sell to cover additional costs of providing service, their plight would not be so serious. But they are subject to close regulation. A feared loss of traffic to competing transportation agencies, moreover, limits increases in freight charges. Of course, if railway labor were "sweated" labor, underpaid and overworked, the plea of financial inability to support the increases demanded would not be a conclusive argument. But railway labor is well paid according to current standards as well as by comparison with the rates of pay of former years. In fact, both as regards monetary wages and wages measured in terms of what he can buy, the railway employe has never been so well off as he is today. There is nothing to excuse these exorbitant wage demands, therefore, except a hope that the roads will capitulate and pay more than they can afford, even though they may refuse to pay as much as asked.

Wine Of Opportunity

The report of the Department of Commerce that virtually all the wines that are now being consumed in the United States are American wines can scarcely cause surprise. The great wine-producing countries must grow other things, and, besides, the trade lanes will have no truck with wine. For even the fastidious palate, it is no longer a choice between one domestic wine and another, or between domestic wine or no wine. Whether our American wine-growers can consolidate the advantage thus fortuitously thrust upon them will depend upon their own intelligence and foresight.

Up to now the American wine industry has devoted itself principally to imitations or reproductions of the more famous and popular wines of France, Italy, Spain and Portugal. In some instances they have achieved an astonishing success. But in no case have they produced a wine that an expert would pronounce as good as the best European wines of the same genus, despite the fact that American grapes are acknowledged, even by Europeans, to be the finest in the world. As was pointed out on this page last December, the way to produce domestic wines that will equal or perhaps surpass in quality the finest Bordeaux or Burgundies is simply to make them more domestic. That is to say, we should seek to develop wines that will contain all the peculiar virtues of the native grapes and of the soil in which they are grown. A palate which is now content (out of necessity) with the excellent sauterne produced in the Finger Lake region of New York will, when the choice is again offered, prefer it to Yquem. But it is quite possible (indeed it has been done, though not commercially) to produce in New York a superb white wine equal or superior to any in the world. The same thing is possible in certain districts of Ohio and California.

Another great opportunity that our winegrowers have is to make the United States a wine-drinking Nation, a term which can scarcely be applied to it now. Again, it is largely the fault of our winegrowers and winemakers that the American taste still tends to fortified and "dessert" wines. These, of course, cannot be consumed regularly and extensively without much damage to the health of the drinker. As we have said before, what is needed are white and red table wines cheap and dry enough, and "light" enough as to alcohol, as to be consumed almost as freely and safely as water.

Hewing Down The Tree

Nelson once said that you can bring down both stem and branches if you hew down the tree. The tree in Hitlerism is, clearly, the supply line with overseas countries. Without it the Hitler menace would eventually find itself doomed in the very center of the war effort. For this reason no more urgent task awaits the Roosevelt Administration in carrying out its pledge to see that Hitler is defeated than to embark wholeheartedly upon an economic blockade. No shooting is involved in any such venture—none of the risks, in other words, which many of our citizenry still feel should be avoided even when naval safeguards at Singapore and Dakar are called for by Hitler's moving finger. Yet an equal palsy afflicts our administrators in regard to economic as well as in regard to naval measures of aggressive defense.

It cannot be reiterated enough that the Nazi war machine is far from being wholly sustained by European production. This is the basic fact about Hitler's war-making. How, then, does he tap the outside world? Mainly through Marseilles. The evidence has accumulated in Washington as in London till there is no excuse for delay in taking firm action with the British to plug up this leak. Vichy's deal with Hitler provides another spur to action which we shall ignore only at the peril of one day seeing Hitler astride all the approaches to this hemisphere. Some of Hitler's extra-continental supplies flowing to him through Marseilles come out of Africa; some out of South America. From the source to the south of us an alternative route to Nazi Germany is across the Pacific and through Japan and Russia. The setting up of a contraband base in the West Indies is thus necessary as well. It ought to be coupled with preemptive buying. In Latin America we are almost doing this perforce. Our own shortages of raw and strategic materials are forcing us into a buying policy that is blocking goods from going to Nazi Germany. Such a policy ought to have been embraced long since in the prosecution of economic warfare. And even now we are not preempting enough markets. A third need was patent till a short while ago, but the opportunity has been lost as a result of our dilatoriness. This was to police the availability of cash to the Axis powers in this country for trade and propaganda purposes in the Americas. A licensing system had been under discussion, but while we were talking Hitler was moving the cash out of the country and inducing his allies and friends to do likewise.

The hewing down of the tree is an objective which the President has stated to the people and which has won the people's approval. The Saturday Evening Post now calls it "an American crusade." To that end, then, let us fuse all our other policies and reconcile our eternal wrangling on procedure. Otherwise we shall find ourselves fronted from the North Cape to middle Africa with a coalition such as the world has never seen before, and have on the other side of us an ally of that coalition who is waiting that very signal to go on a similar rampage. A German war maxim says: Prepare and dare. But we are lagging unconscionably in a twilight zone between the two imperatives.

Ready For Gliders

Had the late Frank Hawks, holder of many air speed records, been around last week, he would have found one of his pet theories translated into dramatic, terrifying action. For the Nazi use of transport-drawn gliders in Crete as an accompaniment of "vertical envelopment," or attack from the skies, is the adaptation of a technique which the American ace, among others, advocated 11 years ago. In the spring of 1930 Hawks crossed the country in a glider towed by a Waco plane. He was bent on showing the military possibilities of gliding, both in training airmen and in transporting troops and material. Nothing much came of the stunt, though it may have boosted interest in gliding for sport, and doubtless was followed with interest in Berlin. At any rate, the German glider attack on Crete shows that for years the Germans must have been indulging in the most intense experimentation with gliders.

It is plain from what is happening in Crete that Britain's home defenders must be prepared to meet and repel Germany's latest scheme for getting the necessary men and equipment on the ground as quickly as possible. The glider has a distinct advantage over the troop transport in that it lands on skids and requires only six to ten yards to come to a stop. Obviously this increases the difficulty of defense, since the glider can swoop down upon terrain impossible for troop planes, which require a level landing space of some 300 yards. The threat of "strings" of gliders, each carrying at least six or eight men, fully armed, each landing almost at will in pastures or backyards, must of necessity spread out the defense. Under these conditions, indeed, defense must literally cover the entire countryside.

This is not to say that Britain is not prepared for glider attack. After the fall of Holland and Belgium the British press was full of conjectures about a glider invasion, and a defense system was rearranged in the light of such a contingency. Presumably, the home defense is confident that if an invasion attempt is made, and Nazi gliders sift past the R. A. F., Britons on the ground will take care of the invaders before they have a chance to consolidate their positions. But Britain, like Crete, possesses sparsely settled areas. Though it should be a good deal easier to isolate invaders there than in Crete, where the resisting force is less well organized, the job calls for extraordinary integration of defense, not merely sheer bravery on the part of the few who may happen to be within firing distance. No doubt the instructions which have been dispensed among the people of Britain since the invasion of Crete have such an integration in view.

Battle Armor

The destruction of the Hood by the Bismarck illustrates perfectly what naval experts have been maintaining for years. That is, when two capital ships of somewhere near the same tonnage and firing power make contact, then, given accurate shooting, the lighter armored ship stands a pretty good chance of being sunk, unless it can get away. But the naval designers have been forced to compromise, some inclining to high speed and great hitting power, others being willing to concede some speed for greater armor protection.

The United States Navy's battle line, for example, is probably the most heavily protected in the world. But it is also the slowest. However, it has the greatest firing power and its uniform speed enables it to swing into action as a compact unit—something which is not true of any other line. Many of the Italian capital ships were built for speed and sacrificed armor protection. What happened to several of them, when caught by the R. A. F. at Taranto and unable to get away, is well known. Though little is reported of the Japanese capital ships now building or recently commissioned, it is a fact that those whose general specifications are known have also followed the Italian reasoning: ships that fight and get away will fight again. From the Japanese viewpoint this may make more sense, since Japan's logical sea opponent is the relatively slow United States battle line.

It may be that the Nazis have come nearer to the ideal of speed and armor and firing power combined than was believed feasible. Certainly the few specifications of the new Bismarck that are available show her to have a beam of 118 feet—greater than that of any other battleship. This indicates much compartmentation and, of course, very heavy armor. Since she can speed at 30 knots plus and carries eight 15-inch guns of unusually heavy caliber, she is obviously one of the toughest ships, if not the toughest, afloat.

Claustrophobic Blues

The deserts of Libya, the wilds of Ethiopia, the isles of Greece, the broad Atlantic, the Yangtze Valley, ring with the clashes of war. Any day now we may find that Greenland's icy mountains or the jungles of Papua or the plateau of Thibet have become the battleground of monstrous armies. So many novelists and journalists have been visiting the headwaters of the Amazon recently that the less up and coming of the natives are beginning to complain that all this tourist business is ruining the ancient charm of the place. The Census Bureau reports that the population of Nevada has so increased that there is now one person per every square mile. And on any pleasant midweek afternoon as many as a thousand persons will go to Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, for a game between the eighth-place Browns and the seventh-place Athletics. It seems as though there is no place left in the world where one can hope to find any real privacy.

"MOON INTO BLOOD"

(Pentecost 1940.)

I did not see lilacs in Liege at Pentecost
Nor in the Lowlands, endlessly, the fields flower-colored.
I did not see the churches nor the women's fearful faces,
(It is the custom there to mark this feast of spring.)
But I perceived ironic meanings for the ancient Pentecostal words:
"And suddenly there came a sound from heaven of a mighty, rushing wind."
(Sound of the sirens. Wind of the swastika.)
"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues of fire."
(Fire of the pyre of freedom.)
"Others, mocking, said 'These men are full of new wine.'"
(Wine of war, wine of the swastika.)
"And your young men shall see visions."
(Visions of violence, visions of blood.)

I did not see the choir boys who still lifted their voices
But one I can imagine, the envy of others' mothers—
Not for his sweeter-than-girl's soprano,
Not that his face was beautiful above the choir-robe
But because he was born blind.
(Visions of violence, visions of blood.)

"The sun shall be turned into darkness
And the moon into blood."

The Miners' Case

I would like to make a few points about the advertisement whoch the Southern coal operators placed in your paper on May 20. These operators live in a glass house and are in no position to throw stones at a man who is largely responsible for organizing millions of American workers, raising their living standards, and establishing a semblance of democratic relations in large American industries. This man is John L. Lewis.

The Southern coal operators maintained the worst sort of discrimination over their workers before the miners' union came in and organized those workers and gave them that protection which every American citizen is entitled to have in his job.

The Southern operators are arousing national hysteria in an effort to protect their profits. The real purpose behind this fight is to deny the miners a 40-cent increase in wages a day. These operators are refusing to pay the $7 a day rate which is paid by Northern operators. The miners' union is justified in insisting on this rate because:

1. The annual earnings of miners, according to Government figures, are less than the minimum needed for a bare subsistence standard of living for a family with two small children.

2. The additional 40 cents in wages would add only 3½ cents to the cost of a ton of coal, which the industry could easily absorb. Government figures show that the output of miners has gone up much more rapidly than their wages, and the operators can well afford to pay this.

Whose War?

Soon after England unlimbered her big bertha's of propaganda on our unsuspecting people, a small yet powerful and highly vocal segment of Americans took up the cry of fear that was being spread by the English. They went through the book and got all the fears they could find, put them together, and have continued to spread them. Unfortunately, we have a lot of people who are easily scared. Orson Welles proved that. I daresay you could take a halloween pumpkin and run Bill Bullitt and his ilk into the Pacific Ocean—the Atlantic would be too close to Hitler. Redblooded people just feel sorry for these timid souls.

But when they begin to write in the papers and preach from the housetops and tell my boy and your boy that their fathers are contemptible poltroons and cowards, there I, for one, draw the line and brand the statement a wretched untruth. When you tell my son that Britain is fighting my battle, thereby branding me in his eyes, I resent the dastardly implication with every fiber of my being. What sort of country would you expect to have, with every son in it thinking his father was a coward?

Here is a sixth column that is doing the times more damage than all the fifth columns in the country.

Holland And Napoleon

I feel inclined to correct an error appearing in Mr. Edward Conn's article published in The Post of May 20. The author makes a mistake where he writes: 'During the Napoleonic wars the Netherlands were annexed for some years to France and later subjected to a Bonapartist prince, their independence being revived by the Treaty of Vienna in 1815."

The facts are as follows:

In 1806, Louis Napoleon was made King of Holland by his brother, Napoleon. He reigned until 1810. In July, 1810, Napoleon annexed the Kingdom of Holland and Lebrun, Duke of Plaisance, was appointed governor. After the Battle of Leipzig (1813) three prominent Dutchmen, van Hogendorp, van der Duyn van Maasdam and the Count van Limburg Stirum formed a provisional government, which invited the Prince of Orange to come over from England in November, 1813. When the German and Russian armies marched into Holland the French fled and the independence of Holland was restored.

Farmers And Consumers

Forcing a tax burdened people and millions of others with low incomes to pay higher prices for farm commodities in order to increase the incomes of the prosperous half of the Nation's farmers, is something that should arouse the ire of all interested in the welfare of American consumers. Certainly, no one could blame the consumers if they buy less of the commodities affected.

Consumers are now footing the bill for conservation payments of $500,000,000, parity payments for $250,000,000, food stamp appropriations and export subsidies of another $250,000,000 more, and a multiple of other benefits for farmers. And now, on top of all that, an 85 per cent of parity loan bill is before the Senate. That bill, if enacted into law, would raise the cost of food and cotton goods, and yet very little of the increase, if any, will go to that half of the Nation's farmers now receiving abnormally low incomes or on the brink of poverty.

The way to deal with those problems is in a farm plan now in the hands of the House Agricultural Committee, which provides incentive payments that influence low income producers to shift to other commodities which are assured a market and provide an income of about $800 in the aggregate.

Such a provision could be included in the loan bill now before the Senate, which, if enacted into law, no farmer need be without at least a security income. And it will work.

If consumers must pay increased prices for food and cotton goods, such increases should benefit all farmers. But if it is only to benefit the prosperous half of the Nation's farmers, then the consumers would be justified in buying less of such commodities.

Germany Not Invincible

Of all the present issues to be thrashed out by public opinion, and Congress, the stand of our appeasers-isolationists ought to be given first place. It looks as if Senator Wheeler, Gen. Wood and Col. Lindbergh have been carried away by their fixation on appeasement plus defeatism against all logic and common sense. Why take it for granted that Germany is invincible, and that Great Britain, even with the aid of the United States, cannot win? The Kaiser won most of the battles in World War I but lost the war to England, whereas the latter, while faring badly on the battlefield, came out triumphant in the end. True, the United States was then, as now, the decisive factor in the war.

The fighting in Europe, despite the sudden ups and downs, is settling down to a war of attrition which to Germany may only mean an enterprise of diminishing returns. Time is decidedly and decisively on the side of Britain, backed as she is by the full might of the United States.

As to internal conditions, we are only familiar with the sorry plight of the British, but, on the other hand, the real situation in Hitlerland is anything but rosy. With dog meat on the official Reich menu, it is not difficult to sense something rotten south of Denmark. Neither does Hess' desertion—or even unofficial peace mission—augur well for Hitler's future successes.

To despair, advocate defeatism, or both, as do the above named gentlemen, at this time is to betray a treasonable attitude to a world fighting against the establishment of a new world slavery.

Wants ASCAP Music Back On Network

Because of a self-imposed embargo, the networks no longer play "The Washington Post March." It is good to know, however, that the great newspaper bearing that name respects the privilege of freedom of the press and dedicates itself to the sehvice of the people. That this is true is evidenced by your recent editorial, "Chain Broadcasting," in which you plead the cause of 130,000,000 stockholders in the American air waves.

As you pointed out, evidence is plentiful of concentrated power. The most obvious example of this seems to have been supplied when the networks on January 1, 1941, "blacked-out" the bulk of our American music. Now that the Federal Communications Commission has moved to break the networks' strangle-hold on our airways, let us hope no such crime can ever again be perpetrated on the American people. The commission's recommendations may involve a sacrifice of privileges on the part of the networks, but is not the cardinal principle of our American system of broadcasting hat it shall operate in the public's interest? Are they serving the public by continuing to exclude from the airways our wanted music? I think not, and many good people agree with me.

It appears that Mutual Broadcasting System, the youngest member of the chain broadcasters, has become aware of its great responsibility in the development of a high morale and the perpetuation of national unity and has given music back to its listeners. Unfortunately, Mutual's affiliated outlets are limited. Nevertheless it has pledged itself to give the people the best in entertainment, and thus contribute to our cultural development. As the leader in the field of chain broadcasting, MBS deserves, and has, the applause of a grateful country.

Our citizen soldiers and enlisted men in all branches of the service will no longer be deprived of the inspiring, patriotic marches of John Philip Sousa, "God Bless America," "Anchors Aweigh," etc. But how long will the executives of NBC and CBS (both of which have an even greater number of outlets) continue to exclude from "their air" the genuine American music of Gershwin, Grofe and Handy in favor of tidal waves of foreign rumbas, congas, and all?

These exotic dance idioms are stimulating and spicy ingredients in a program balanced with our native product. But wat in heaven's name do you suppose would have happened in the old prewar Austria should an imperialistic dict have barred from the public's hearing all sounds of Johann Strauss, Millocker, Zierer, Kallman, and Lehar, and had substituted for them Italian trantellas, Scotch reels and Irish jigs? Why, nothing short of anarchy and revolt would have ensued.

The Post Impressionist

Butch: A Bunny

One shouldn't be held accountable for promises made at bedtime, I thought as I went downstairs, for grubby little faces are clean then and blue eyes are innocent and imploring. But I had given my word, and there was nothing to do but keep it. The next step was to convince Daddy of the great desirability of buying a live rabbit for Easter. I took up my knitting and cleared my throat.

"Every little child needs a pet," I pronounced, feeling a little inadequate.

My husband is a one-animal man, and the cat is that one. The big orange Persian chose that moment to stalk across our line of vision, but after all he had no bearing on the subject. Under no circumstances could Flambeau be termed our pet, indeed, it would be more accurate to say that the relationship is reversed.

"Rabbits are gentle," I went on, "and they eat scraps of lettuce and tops of carrots—they're easy to feed." The cat sniffed; he is choosy about his food. Donald scratched him behind the ears, and he looked mollified.

"How about settling for a rabbit pie? The SPCA asks parents not to give their children live rabbits."

"They mean the irresponsible ones. But take our children——" From Father's face it was evident that he had taken our children and was remembering the last raid on his tool chest. I tried another angle. "Well, having a pet might develop a sense of responsibility."

He gave in.

Easter morning found Butch, a pink-eared and plushy white, enthroned for a single theatrical moment on top of a nest of Easter eggs. He loved it, and devoured the green and purple celophane grass with enthusiasm. Before we could stop him he had eaten the wrapping paper from around Mary's prize chocolate egg and was polishing off the sugar roses. We lifted him out of the basket by the scruff of his neck and put him down on the floor, but that made little difference; the rug was just as good as candy, and there was more of it.

The rest of the day was a succession of triumphs and disgraces for Butch. The children wanted to take him to Sunday school, and it took a bit of talking to dissuade them. However, it seemed inadvisable to leave such an appetite at large, so we put him in a bushel basket with a large carrot and a half dozen leaves of green cabbage to console him. When we came home the basket was empty except for Butch, who looked up at us with famished anticipation.

It was rather cunning to watch him absorb food, but at times the mouth was quicker than the eye. My sister came in, resplendent with an orchid corsage, and made the dreadful mistake of picking up the furry little creature and holding him in her arms. When she put him down, all that was left of her glory was a flower pin and a purple ribbon. I offered to replace it with an early iris and a piece of maidenhair fern (I can look back and remember how lovely the tender green leaves looked in the fern bed on Easter Sunday), but she was afraid that someone might notice.

Perhaps it was breaking the Sabbath, but the two Donalds lost no time in building a pen for Butch in the back yard. It was an emergency job, put up hurriedly in a corner, with the garage and the back fence serving as two of the walls. But iron bars do not a prison make, nor wooden boards a pen, and early the next morning the neighbors on the other side of the fence telephoned to say that a white rabbit was eating her flowers. She was very nice about it. However, Butch was clearly a public enemy. We brought him back into the house until wire reinforcements could be bought.

The vitamins he had consumed were beginning to have their effect, and his leaps through the house were high and hair-raising. I moved everything edible (according to Butch's standard) to the top of the highboy and bookcases, and he spent most of the morning mooning over an underglass garden I had planted in a huge green rum bottle. It was the only time I have seen him utterly frustrated.

Of course his first experience with Flambeau came near to being his last, but Butch is not easily discourage. The cat lay napping in a chair, with his long, fluffy tail hanging over the side. Butch blinked, no doubt thinking it was a new kind of vegetable. He happened within eating range and took a tentative nibble. Delicious! Flambeau roused with the second bite, and, as the saying goes, he hasn't red hair for nothing. Every few days the rabbit tries it again, and Flambeau is beginning to sleep with his tail curled under him.

But it is amazing how engaging the little glutton can be. He answers to his name and leaps with joy when the bars of his pen are opened. He likes to be cuddled against one's shoulder, and purrs like a cat when his soft white fur is stroked. The children find him a wonderful playmate; he wears doll dresses with style and aplomb, and delights in a ride in a baby carriage.

Some day, however, Butch is going to bite too far. Just one more raid on my fern bed, and I am going to dig a nice, deep rabbit hole and push him down into it. Then I'll put a stone marker on top, which will say:

Here Lies Butch.
He Dug His Grave With His Teeth.

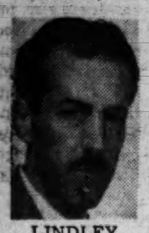
In The Doldrums

By Ernest K. Lindley

Lag In Defense Production



LINDLEY

THE WASHINGTON atmosphere is much like it was last November and December. There is confusion, backbiting and agitation. A few officials are clamoring for bold and decisive actions, both in the conduct of foreign policy and the defense production program. But once again, the main burden of explanation and agitation is being carried by journalists. The President appears to dally, as he did after the election last fall.

The doldrums of November-December were broken by the creation of OPM and the lend-lease plan. Responsiblity for getting defense production is fixed in OPM. It was a big step forward from the old NDAC. The lend-lease program was the answer to the demand—and evident need—for more effective aid to Great Britain.

But for weeks it has become increasingly evident that neither step went far enough.

OPM, as presently constituted, is not measuring up to the job. This is the verdict of every outside observer with whom this reporter has talked. And the verdict is heartily seconded by many men within OPM.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION has not bogged down; it is moving ahead rapidly on a vast scale. But it is not moving with the speed or on the scale which most experts are unanimously agreed are both imperative and feasible.

Time after time the businessmen in the key places of NDAC and OPM underestimated the dimensions of their task. Last fall they asserted that there would be enough aluminum, enough magnesium—enough of almost everything. Even two months ago they were still insisting that there would be enough steel—and they got the President to put himself on record to that effect. Their calculations were terribly wrong.

For months farsighted people have been urging that the small plants be put to work on defense orders. That the big orders should go first to the big concerns was natural and proper. But it was obviously necessary, if we were to get an all-out defense production, to bring the smaller units into play as rapidly as possible. Now for months subcontracting has been encouraged. There has been some progress, but nothing like enough.

Now the double squeeze is beginning to be felt. The supply of metals for civilian consumption is dwindling. And there is reason to think that the smaller manufacturers are being squeezed first. These productive facilities have not been lined up for defense work. It is entirely possible that within a few months several thousand small factories will have to be closed for lack of materials. There are some 1,200 which use aluminum alone—and every scrap of aluminum that can be produced, and more, is going to be needed for national defense.

THE GREAT RESOURCES of the automobile industry are being diverted to defense production very gradually. Only a few weeks ago William S. Knudsen got the industry to agree to reduce production 20 per cent next season—20 per cent from this year's high figure. Almost every Government expert who had looked into the subject had said previously that a 40 to 50 per cent reduction would be required.

The record shows that OPM, and the same men in NDAC, have been faulty in their planning and tender in their approach to their business friends. Some of them point out that they are still lacking formal authority to get tough. There was much in that explanation under the old NDAC. And, strictly legally, it is still partly true. But the counter-complaint is that OPM has not used the power which it has.

The serious miscalculations of the need for metals, and the persistent reluctance to approve expansion of aluminium, magnesium and steel capacity, are not traceable to lack of authority. And lack of authority explains only a fraction of the slow progress in putting idle machine tools to work.

In one way or another, everybody, from the President down, understands the size of the defense job. But dozens of Government officials and experts have been ahead of many of the OPM officials since the start a year ago. Their repeated warnings of materials shortages were ridiculed or indignantly denied by businessmen.

The greatest over-all defect in OPM seems to be the lack of a sense of urgency. Knudsen is easygoing and reluctant to take matters into his hands.

William L. Batt, Donald Nelson and a few businessmen at OPM, have seen all along some of the things which were wrong. They have prodded and pushed, to some avail. But the organization as a whole seems to lack fire, drive and imagination.

The conviction is crystallizing in the Administration that the President will have to shake up OPM. If his more aggressive advisers have their way, a good many businessmen will be told that they can now go back to their regular jobs.

At the same time, it is realized, the President himself must delegate more power and responsibility. The White House itself is a bottleneck.

Progress On The Farm

SULLIVAN

AVONDALE, Chester County, Pennsylvania—In this old farmhouse the other day we installed an electric cookstove. To locate it convenient to the electric wiring, we opened up a long-closed fireplace in the northern wall of the house. Into the deep recess we pushed the electric stove, until its shining modernity encountered resistance from a stout bastion of the past—a big, hand-wrought iron hook projecting from the side-wall of the old fireplace. The hook, in the days when it served a sturdy usefulness, was a support and hinge, from which swung the crane, at that time the only way of cooking the old house knew. We could have removed the ancient hook readily, and pushed the electric stove farther back. But we decided to sacrifice a few inches of space for the sake of a sentimental symbolism. In a struggle in which the major engagements go the other way, this one small rear-guard battle between modern chromium and rusty wrought-iron was permitted to be won by the defender of the past.

When I was a child here, the crane had already been superseded, though only a little while before. The crane itself—little more than 6 feet of iron rod bent to form a triangle, lay ignominiously upon what we called the "old iron pile," demeaned companion of old horseshoes, worn-out ploughshares and other bits of disused farm impedimenta.

THE "OLD IRON PILE" was a definite location in every farm's geography, as fixed a landmark as the springhouse, the fodder stack, or the rhubarb patch. Ours was back of the corn crib, at the edge of the orchard, beneath the tree that bore the russet apples (called by us "rusty coats). On each farm, the pile of discarded bits of iron grew by the diligence of the farm's small boy, whose recognized property it was, his first experience in possession and acquisition. Once a year or so, the accumulatoin was turned into small cash—by the eagerly awaited visits of an itinerant "old iron man."

Whether it was I, or some successor in a dynasty of small boys, who sold the old crane away from the farm on which it had once been the warming center, I do not know. Nor can I imagine what transmutations it may have passed through—by this time there must have been many. A dozen times by now the old crane may have passed through the cycle of alchemies—first, scrap iron; then new steel, the new steel made into some implement or other; then desuetude again, and finally scrap iron once more. I wonder in what reincarnation that old crane may be today, and where. Perhaps an atom of a battleship.

Successor to the crane was the stove—called by us just "the stove," for at that time it was the only one in the house. Presently there was a "kitchen stove" and also a "parlor stove"—both were fed by wood. Today, with an electric stove in the kitchen, and the rest of the house heated by a coal-stoked steam furnace, this house, for the first time since the day it was first a home for man, will be without need for a woodpile.

FOR WHAT REASON has the woodpile been neglected by song and story, while that other attribute of rural house-yards, the well and the well-sweep and the old oaken bucket, has been a favorite theme of poets, bards and artists? Of the two, the woodpile was the more indispensable, and usually prior in time, for the frontier settlers got their water from nearby springs or brooks until they had leisure to dig a well. A woodpile they had to have from the first day they cooked breakfast.

In the classics, and in primitive mythology, the source of heat was rather more celebrated than the source of water. Yet I have never read a poem about a woodpile, nor heard a song about one, nor seen one in pictures—not even do the starkly realistic portrayals of farm scenes by Grant Wood contain a woodpile. Was there one in Currier and Ives?—I don't recall. The one allusion in story or legend that is familiar is the folklore phrase for deviousness, "a nigger in the woodpile." Doubtless that phrase will soon pass out of the language; whatever aptness it had when first invented has long ago been forgotten—it is now a mere cliche; the word "nigger" is becoming taboo through consideration for the race to whom it was once applied, and the woodpile is fast becoming extinct.

THE PERMANENT FOUNDATION of the woodpile was a large log, prone on the ground, used as a chopping block. Across this big log were laid smaller ones, to be chopped or split into stove-lengths by the descending axe. Another permanent fixture was the saw-horse, a kind of small wooden trestle upon which logs could be placed at a height sufficient to be sawed without too back-breaking a stoop. The stove-wood that was the output of this primitive operation was piled in a rough pyramid. The difference between a large pile, cut in winter to last the year, and a small pile containing only enough for a day, was the difference between a forehanded farmer and a careless one. If the wood was not just thrown into a rough pyramidal heap, but was neatly stacked, that was the mark of an orderly family. Carrying the wood into the house, called "filling the woodbox," was a small boy's chore.

All that, all the hewing and hauling, all the paraphernalia of woodpile and woodbox, is being pushed from the countryside by the advancing antennae of rural electrification. All the work, and art, of providing heat for cooking is compressed into the turn of a switch by a thumb and finger—which, on our farm, sometimes have crimson-enameled nails.

Time For Decision

By Joseph Alsop and Robert Kintner

President Pressed To Act

ALSOP

FOR THE FIRST time in the course of the war the President is under really strong pressure from virtually all of his most important advisers. Hitherto, one department or another has fought sporadically for this or that line of policy. Measures have been taken almost in haphazard. But now, according to well-informed officials, there is virtual unanimity.

The potent on which this unanimity exists is a deeply significant one. For the fact is that all of the chief men of the War and Navy Departments and most of the influential advisers at the State Department are now agreed that active aid to Britain, first in the Battle of the Atlantic and later elsewhere, can not be much longer delayed if the British are to win the war.

The report brought back from London by Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps and deputy Chief of the Staff, crystallized this conclusion. And the conclusion is understood to have been forcefully confirmed by the equally important report on the British situation made a few days later by Under Secretary of Navy James Forrestal, on his return from England.

FORRESTAL'S opportunities to review the balance of the war were the best possible, for during his entire stay in London he was in closest contact with Prime Minister Winston Churchill and other important personages. Moreover, as one of the shrewdest of the new members of the Administration and a very careful observer, his opinions carry great weight, both at the White House and the Navy Department.

It is conceded in all informed circles that the time factor is the most serious of all the numerous elements in the national situation which the President must consider before reaching a decision. It is, of course, impossible to estimate precisely in terms of days, weeks or perhaps months. No one can tell exactly how long it will be safe for this country to maintain its present attitude. But it is known that the ablest strategists at both the War and Navy Departments believe that the curve of the war will descend very rapidly in the next few weeks. And no one disagrees that once progressive degeneration of the strategic situation has set in, it will be extremely difficult to arrest.

THE REASONS for these conclusions are obvious to anyone who reads the headlines. Because this country has so far failed to make the effort necessary to cover the margin between success and failure, the three great battles now being fought—the Battle of the Atlantic, the Battle of the Mediterranean and the Battle of Morale—all seem to be going against the British. The officials urging the President to move both promptly and decisively believe that active American aid will be sufficient to turn the tide, or at least stabilize the balance until a British offensive striking power can be built up. The difficulty appears to be not doubt of America's naval and military power; but doubt as to the country's readiness to permit the President to use the power.

There is great interest, therefore, in an analysis of the President's problem as presented by one of the men who is advising him. This official points out that when the President embarked on the policy of aiding the democracies against the dictatorships, he risked his entire achievement, his reputation with the people and his future place in history. If the policy fails, his Administration will be worse than a failure, for it will end in national disunion.

THEREFORE, still according to this official, the President finds himself in the position of a man who has put his entire fortune on one bet, sees the bet going sour, but still has the chance to bet double or quits. Yet if he doubles up, there is additional risk in the sense that he may not be followed by the people. But his immediate danger is easier to face than the ultimate result of losing the bet.

KINTNER

There are several signs recently to minimize the possibility of bad consequences if the President makes a prompt decision. In the first place, the Gallup poll now shows a narrow majority for convoys, instead of a rather small minority previously in favor of it. Although convoys may not be the solution in the Battle of the Atlantic, this same group would presumably be for any type of shipping protection the President chooses to order. The President's advisers have been arguing that the country will follow him if the facts are made clear. This coupled with the reports of the military strategists gives every reason to believe that the President will announce important decisions in his address on Tuesday.

The Civilian Defense Chief

("Mayor LaGuardia will function as Organizer of Civilian Defense, O. C. D., throughout the nation:"—News item.)

There he functions busily—
Fiorello, O. C. D.
Seeking action P. D. Q.,
Where there's work for all to do.

Full of gusto, see him go,
In his eyes that redhot glow!
Planning things from A to Z,
Dazzling you and dazzling me.

Has defense work shown a lag?
Henceforth it is in the bag!
Have the home folks been asleep?
He will make 'em jump and leap.

Are the cities in a daze?
They'll be 'roused to swifter ways;
Is there fumbling all about?
He will make 'em cut it out.

Do the mayors far and near
Full of lethargy appear?
Man the ramparts! Grab a gun!
Here comes Big Chief Rising Sun!

Are there villages not few
That do not know what to do?
Hear the sirens whining now . . .
Fiorello'ss show 'em how!

See the treetops bend and shake!
It's the breeze in that man's wake;
Counties, States and cities sway . . .
Fiorello's near! Hey! Hey!

Action Drama! Pep and snap!
Gusto ever kept on tap!
For these things our troubles call—
Heap Big Chief has got 'em all!

Energy and lots of vim.
Gestures in each upper limb;
He who sleeps in pants and shoes—
Wottaman he was to choose!

Fire helmet on his head,
Rubber boots and shirt of red,
Fire axes in his grip . . .
Are you ready? Let' er rip!

Sirens screaming day and night—
Slambang through all traffic tight;
Hose and hydrant on the spot . . .
Proclamations served red hot . . .

Auto, fire engine, bike—
Speedboat, aeroplane and mike—
Fury, passion, drama, fun—
Watch Hizzoner get it done!

Is There No Justice?

A snake-oil peddler was sent to jail for two days in New York the other day. This depresses us. We have a soft spot in our heart for snake-oil peddlers. We haven't seen one in years and they have become almost extinct, but back in our boyhood days they were familiar figures in the home town streets. We remember the Kickapoo Indian Sagwa venders, sometimes long-haired men in Stetson hats. And we think that, real or bogus, these remedies did a lot of good. The folks believed in 'em, and that was half the cure. "Step up, now, ladies and gentlemen, and get a bottle while they last. And remembah, a silver pocket-knife, a watch chain and a lucky charm with every bottle . . ."

The difference between those days and these is that you could generally tell the fakirs from the legitimate people.

Whirlaway is so fast that there is now talk of getting him a match race over any distance with LaGuardia.

CAA Aids Defense

Reservoir Of Pilots

What is the future of American aviation? The Associated Press has asked a number of Governmental and industrial leaders to discuss various phases of the question. Here is the first of six daily stories—Editor's note.)

By Robert H. Hinkley
Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

AMERICA'S defense problem is twofold: A race against time for production of (1) modern equipment and (2) trained manpower.

About the first category none of us needs worry, if this Nation has sufficient time and gets after the job in earnest. We always have excelled at any job of industrial production to which we set the national mind.

In the second category, one of the most urgent necessities is a large force of pilots. Fortunately for our security in this respect, there has been in operation since 1939 a program which has been creating a vast reservoir of pilot material—50,000 boys of the right age, physical condition and education, who have learned enough about flying to merit a private pilot's license. I speak of the civilian pilot training program conducted by the Civil Aeronautics Administration of the Department of Commerce.

Under this program, the CAA contracts with colleges and flight schools all over the country—well over 900 centers at present—to give pilot training courses to qualified young people. While thus widely decentralized, the program is subject to certain controls—the instructors must meet CAA standards of competency, they use standard CAA texts and outlines, and to win their licenses students must pass CAA examinations in both ground school subjects and actual flying. The CAA pays the institution—only costs to the students are medical examination fee, insurance premium, and in some cases a $10 registration charge.

The CPT program was initiated In 1939, before the outbreak of war, with civilian aims uppermost in mind—the encouragement of private flying, of the manufacture and purchase of light planes, and of air-mindedness in general. But because we knew what Germany was doing, there was present from the start the idea that if this country should need great numbers of pilots for defense, here would be a large reservoir of them with at least a beginning.

NO ONE ever has claimed that the CPT trainees are military pilots. But each of them is nearer to that objective by at least 35 hours of flying, and when you multiply that by a potential 50,000, you have a saving of time that is tremendously important in an emergency.

It was with this in mind that Congress authorized a tremendous boost in CPT activity when the world situation became very threatening in the late spring of 1940. The CPT was started with an appropriation of $4,000,000 to train 10,000 pilots during the school year 1939-40. For the succeeding year, the appropriation was suddenly upped to $37,000,000.

To meet this challenge, the CAA called upon the participating schools to complete three sessions during the year, with 15,000 new pilots to be trained each session. In addition, it wrote a secondary course, designed to carry 8,000 selected students through more advanced maneuvers on a military trainer plane, and refresher courses to qualify several thousand pilots to instruct in the program.

That the CPT program has given us a real head start toward air defense is already being amply demonstrated.

Here are the essential defense facts about the civilian pilot training program:

From more than 900 training centers, three-fourths of which are at colleges, this program is producing 3,500 healthy, enthusiastic young private pilots per month, and 1,000 more advanced fliers per month. Every day it is seasoning and refreshing a host of flight instructors. These instructors are moving in a steady stream from this program, to staff the expanded teaching forces of defense activity. This program not only is the only large-scale incubator of flight instructors; it also is producing first-stage civilian fliers faster than any nation ever produced them before. And in general these boys are cut to the pattern required by the military air services.

The Crucial Struggle In The Middle Sea

NOVER

"FOR BRITAIN in time of war," said Winston Churchill in the House of Commons on March 16, 1939, "the command of the Mediterranean must be the prime objective."

At that time France, the French Empire and the French fleet were still allied to Great Britain and there was no certainty that Italy would join her Axis partner in war as, indeed, she cautiously refrained from doing during the period between September 1, 1939, and June 10, 1940. Since then, however, the Mediterranean situation has undergone a very considerable deterioration so far as the British are concerned. The outlook for them in that area has never been blacker. But their determination to retain command of the Middle Sea is as great as ever.

"The loss of the Nile Valley and Suez Canal," said Churchill as recently as on May 8 of this year "of our position in the Mediterranean and of Malta would be among the heaviest blows we could sustain." And in that same speech he declared: "We intend to defend to death, without thought of retirement, the valuable and highly offensive outposts of Crete and Tobruk."

BRITAIN'S strength in the Mediterranean is the strength she derives from her sea power. In that category she has no serious rivals in the Middle Sea. Admiral Darlan's pledge to the contrary notwithstanding, there is a possibility that the French fleet may sooner or later be turned over to Germany. But that has not yet happened. For the time being, the French fleet remains immobilized. And the Italian fleet has suffered such serious losses as a result of what happened at Taranto and Cape Matapan as to constitute no real threat to British sea power. The effective convoy through the Straits of Sicily the other day of a large shipment of war supplies destined for the Army of the Nile is proof of that.

However, the task of the British navy has, since the fall of France, become so great that it has not been able to exercise its full effectiveness in the Mediterranean. This circumstance Hitler has capitalized. He has also capitalized other grave weaknesses in the British situation, notably the British lack of air power, mechanized equipment and military effectives in adequate numbers to defend far-flung positions.

THE TASK facing the Germans in seeking control of the Mediterranean is to circumvent sea power by other means. If they succeed, the British fleet will have to clear out of the entire area between Gibraltar and Suez. But until the British are up against that extremity the fight for the Mediterranean will not be over.

That is why the most important single spot on the map, so far as the struggle in the Mediterranean is concerned, is Alexandria. Should the British lose Alexandria they would lose the Mediterranean no matter what other points they held in that area. As long as they retain it, the fleet would continue to have a base from which it would still be possible to operate even though it might, because of the loss of other strongholds, have to operate under severe handicaps.

WITHOUT sea power a direct German attack on Alexandria is impossible. Hitler has therefore, been forced to try the land route. When Gen. Wavell found it necessary to withdraw several divisions from conquered Cyrenaica and send them to Greece, Hitler's mechanized legions moved into Libya and in less than a fortnight recaptured from the British the entire region between Bengazi and Solum. Since then, however, the Axis forces have made no further headway in Egypt. In the meantime Gen. Wavell has not only been able to reinforce the army of the Nile but also to furnish his troops with new equipment. The odds in the Egyptian campaign which seemed so unfavorable to the British late last April have turned in their favor.

Unable to drive the British out of Egypt by a frontal attack, Hitler has resorted to other devices. The coup d'etat of Rashid Ali al-Gailani in Iraq, followed as it was by a struggle against the British, forced the latter to divert men, planes and machines to a new theater of war. That was quite in accordance with Hitler's plans. Nor does it matter very much that Rashid Ali's forces now appear to be in process of disintegration. This Arab Quisling has done what had been expected of him by the Nazis.

Later, the British were forced to divert men and planes to the Syrian border as a consequence of the Vichy government's sell-out to Berlin and the use by Nazi planes of Syrian airfields.

Most serious of all, the last week has seen an ambitious effort by the Germans to win control of Crete by means of air-borne troops. The issue of that struggle remains in doubt. But since the Anglo-Greek forces on the island are limited in number and Hitler appears willing to make tremendous sacrifices of men and materiel to achieve his objective the British have no occasion for optimism in contemplating the situation in Crete.

SHOULD THE NAZIS succeed in taking possession of Crete, and that is a real possibility, the blow to Britain's position in the eastern Mediterranean would be very serious indeed, though not necessarily fatal. The distance from Crete to Alexandria is not too great for bombing planes although out of reach of fighters. But with Crete in their hands the Aegean would become an Axis lake, Turkey would be practically surrounded by the Axis, Cyprus might have to be evacuated by the British and the British fleet would find it difficult to interrupt Axis ships moving men and supplies into Syria. A German drive on Suez from the north might then become feasible.

There can be no minimizing the importance of the fierce struggle now raging in Crete. The outcome may have a great bearing on the larger struggle for the control of the Middle Sea.

Bill Cunningham Covers Some Strictly Local News

By Eugene Pharo

BILL Cunningham, feature writer for The Post, couldn't be found in Washington Friday until just before the Louis-Baer fight. Although he was expected here to report that event, he also was digging up some local news strictly within the confines of his own family.

It revolved about Mrs. Mary E. Cunningham, of 1031 North Nelson Street, Arlington, Va., and the story ranked well up among the Texas-New Englander's best—and he knows and has written some honeys. Yet it didn't occur to him to make "copy" of it, a reticence that some of those he saw the day after the fight did not share.

On Saturday, Bill was still chiefly interested in the Arlington lady, who happened to be his mother, but he had to see some editors. He took his mother along. The solution was simple:

Rather, she took him along, for at about 75 years, Mrs. Cunningham is an excellent automobile driver. She chauffered Bill around to the editors, as she had chauffeured him in a sight-seeing trip around Washington Friday while some of these same editors were wondering where he was.

NOW this business of driving him around reminded Cunningham of several good stories about his mother, and he told about them with all the more gusto because, after 19 years devoted almost exclusively to sports writing, he recently has widened his field as Westbrook Pegler did before him. Several editors have been impressed with his ability to see clearly, and to write well and pungently. So they have influenced him to take in much more of the world than sports.

Under such a scheme of things it was hardly possible, that he would overlook the saga of his own mother. For it makes a tale quite in harmony with the pieces he is writing about the soldier boys in various camps between his home office in Boston and the State of Texas where he was born and where he is now headed on an assignment. It was based, that is, on an indomitable resolution and an unquestioning courage, as well as upon a steadfast faith in America.

"My Aunt Ruth, a very large lady, who has been very sick, had been staying with mother in Arlington for a long time," Bill said. "Mother insisted on taking care of her—she always has to be taking care of some one.

"But some of the rest of us thought that it would be better if some other members of the family took over the responsibility. Mother is well into her seventies—although she has told us that she has been 55 for some time, and will continue to be 55 for some time to come. Yet it didn't seem right to age her any more quickly than necessary.

"So her older brother said he would take care of Aunt Ruth. This brother, my uncle, is about 81. A few years ago, he retired as a Presbyterian preacher in Oklahoma, and went to Ladonia, Tex. While there he took the bar examinations, and became a lawyer. He is now city attorney.

Bill Cunningham and his mother

"He was eager to assume the care of my aunt, but the problem remained of getting her safely from Arlington to Ladonia. She is, as I have said, a very large lady and weighs a great deal. She is ill and must have the best of care continuously.

"We inquired about trains, about trailers, and about chartering an airplane, but finally my mother decided that the only right way to get her to Texas was by automobile. She had a small touring car fixed up so that Aunt Ruth could be comfortable in it, and her needs could be taken care of, and set off by herself with her passenger, staying at tourist camps."

AT THIS point Mrs. Cunningham interrupted to take up some of the tale herself, for it seems that she is not untouched by her son's instinct for telling a good story.

"I thought I ought to write an article about American men," she interrupted. "Of course I couldn't handle Aunt Ruth alone, but I figured that there would be men at all the tourist camps, and there were, and they were wonderful.

"I would simply drive into a camp, and I'd tell them about Ruth, and they would get a rocking chair and put her in it and carry her to a cabin. It all worked very well. If the men of America are all like that, the country's safe.

"Altogether," Mrs. Cunningham added, with the motorist's sure instinct for statistics, "I drove 4,700 miles on that trip."

It seemed that Bill's mother thought she might as well stop for a little visit on the way with another sister in Healdton, Okla., and that after she had delivered her passenger at Uncle William's (The Rev. William A. Roach's), she would have been remiss if she didn't drive on the additional 100 miles or so to Dallas and visit her old friends there.

Dallas is the home town of both Bill and his mother. Mrs. Cunningham's father, the Rev. William Roach, went to Dallas from Paducah, Ky., at about the time of the Civil War. Traveling and living then were both very close to pioneering, and Mrs. Cunningham ever since has considered herself more in the light of a pioneer woman than a "clinging vine."

"I don't cling to people; they cling to me," she said, when the matter was introduced.

IT WAS in Dallas that Mr. Cunningham died when their only child, William (the Bill Cunningham whom we started to write about), was 12 years old.

"It was mother who took care of me and saw that I got through school," Bill took up the tale. Although Bill was a major performer in sports, and particularly in football before he ever wrote about them, his mother had seen him play in only one football game. This was in his senior year at prep school (Terrill, near Dallas), when he was captain of the team. His mother came out unannounced and kept in the background in the crowd in order not to "fluster" him. His team won, incidentally.

This was in 1915, five years before Bill, playing center on the Dartmouth team, made Walter Camp's All-American.

Mrs. Cunningham has attended only one sports event with her son since he became New England's most widely-known sports writer and then forged ahead to become one of the most highly paid, if not the most highly paid, sports reporter in the United States.

"I took mother to a fight once," Bill said, "and the loser was literally getting his brains knocked out.

"I've never forgotten," he added, "because mother said she didn't want to see any more. 'He's somebody's boy!' she protested."

"When Bill was on the Dartmouth team, and I was down in Texas," Mrs. Cunningham said in answer to a question, "I always knew the hour the game began, and I would walk the floor until it was over.

"Usually at the end, Bill wired me: 'We won—unhurt.' Then I could relax."

BEFORE and after these early games, Bill had run plenty of chance of getting hurt. In 1918 it was in France, where he saw action both as an Infantry officer with the 112th of Pennsylvania's Iron Division, and as first lieutenant of field artillery.

After returning to the United States and resuming his studies at Dartmouth on a scholarship, Bill deliberately flunked exams before his first possible commencement, which would have been in 1920, because he was eligible for another year at football.

His mother had gone to Dartmouth to see him graduate, but she was not surprised. "I figured you'd do that," she remembered proudly on Saturday. It was demonstrated amply that the flunking was deliberate, when next year Cunningham won a Rhodes scholarship to Oxford. He has never taken it up however.

"I was getting older, and too much was happening," he explained.

After leaving Dartmouth, Cunningham spent a year as general news writer on the Dallas News. In 1922, he went to Boston on leave of absence and took a job on the Boston Post.

They put him on sports, because the only story of his they had seen was one on the Centre College-Texas A. and M. game. Until recently, he said, he was still on that leave of absence, and he was still writing sports.

BUT NOW he writes for other papers and he writes about anything that interests him—lots of things do, his mother included.

Bill married in 1921, Miss Doris Wilde, a "Yankee girl" from Attleboro, Mass. They have two children, Lydia, 14, and Marcia, 11.

Bill's mother still has a family, although she took her sister home to Texas. It consists of two young cousins, both Government workers, who live with her in the Arlington residence. They are Miss Nelly White and Miss Sally White, both of them from North Carolina. As long as they need her, Mrs. Cunningham says, she does not intend to complete the journey her son has been urging on her for several years, from her former home in Dallas, Tex., to his present home in Boston, Mass.

"I'm not ready yet," she said, "to retire and become an old lady. I think I'll stay in Arlington until I'm much older than 55."

Bill Cunningham's Column:

. . . . Leahy Becomes 'Fighting Frank' at Notre Dame

By Bill Cunningham

Notre Dame wound up her spring football with a full dress rehearsal, next September's varsity gallantly coming from behind to quell the retiring seniors. Frank Leahy, the tense and moody young mentor with the ecclesiastical mien, packed his bags and headed East to visit his family for the first time in eight weeks. If he didn't consider the job good, he apparently considered it as good as could be done, for he said, "We'll only lose a couple."

The young man has hardened perceptibly in the hot flame of criticism. Whether the criticism was fair or foul is beside the point at the moment. The main item now is what sort of coach it's going to make out of Frank Leahy, and the best guessing is that it's going to make a great one. If he lacked anything important during his Boston College career, it was decision and personal force. He always seemed a little too professionally humble, a little too awed by it all. Some of the captious considered it strictly a pose.

But pose or not, it's all been burned away in the weeks since last February, for that young man stepped into a white hot spot, and although he may have been "The Cinderella Man" going in, the stroke of midnight has found him looking like the captain of the guard.

He's been through a lot of shootin' since he left the Boston scene. The breaking of his freshly signed Boston College contract, or, more accurately, his demand of release from same, to accept the Notre Dame post, brought charges of ingratitude, double dealing and the considerable likes. And then came the matter of those football plays.

Players Added Fuel to Fire

The best freshman tackle at Boston College, a young gentleman named Bouley, suddenly suffered a complete academic dislocation and was reported in South Bend. A couple of potential All Americas in the Connecticut academy of Marianapolis, commonly, and perhaps disrespectfully classed in sports patois as "a Boston College farm," were seen on the famed Midwestern campus in tow of their coach, gazing at the golden dome, the great dormitories and that fine athletic plant with shining eyes that were popped out so far you could have hung your hat and overcoat on them.

That set off the dread word, "raiding" in New England, and it rang around the country. The fire suddenly broke out away down in New Orleans, where two great high school stars, Paul Limont and O. J. Key, decided to seek educations at Notre Dame instead of their local institutions. The second of these, Key, is practically the equivalent of Chicago's great Bill Decorrevont, of a few seasons back, so far as high school reputations and publicity go. Tulane had hoped to receive both these magnificent contributions, and the fell charge, "stealing," began to ring through the bayous.

But the facts didn't back it.

Then there were sundry local difficulties on the South Bend front. The new coaching staff began to drive and drive hard. This apparently was something new. It attended strictly to business, eschewing all social engagements. Word began to get around that it was a little high hat. From this it was only a step to whisper that it was perhaps too green and too young.

No Longer A Cinderella Man

But it drove steadfastly on, and started to make changes locally considered revolutionary. First the squad was cut to 55 men. This had never been done at Notre Dame, not even by Rockne. Wasn't it tradition at Notre Dame that everybody could play football? With the new coach, apparently only the best could play football. He had a building job to do. Maybe everybody can play when the main team is on top, but when it's down, there's no time to waste on incidental passengers.

Then came secret practice. This likewise was new, and a howl promptly started, but Leahy had reason to believe that some of his upcoming opposition was parking scouts in the stands to see what was what. He had prospective observers come first to the field house thereafter and establish their motives before granting a pass. The local idle hailed this as something unfair.

All this adds up to some exceptional heavy duty and a toughening, perhaps, disillusioning experience for a new, young coach in a national spot. If anybody wants to say the young man asked for it, that's his right and privilege, but the net result is a football coach who's probably going to have to be reckoned with henceforth. Don't say Cinderella around Leahy any more. Make it Fighting Frank, now, and you'll be a lot closer.

Notre Dame's opposition take notice.

Draft Boards Asked to Defer Farm Labor

Because the current farm labor shortage has become "a serious problem," Selective Service headquarters here last night called on draft boards throughout the Nation to give "most serious consideration" to deferment requests by agricultural workers.

The action on the part of Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, acting director of the Selective Service system, followed a letter from Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, in which the Cabinet officer warned that the man power demands of defense industry and the armed forces had created a condition that "is very serious in some areas."

Secretary Wickard revealed that between April 1, 1940, and the same date this year the available supply of farm labor through the country decreased by 17.8 per cent.

Most seriously affected area, according to Wickard, is the Middle Atlantic States, where the agricultural labor supply fell 25.9 per cent. An acute shortage is also felt in New England, where farm labor dropped 25.1 per cent, and the east North Central States, 21.6 per cent.

Wickard's Appeal

In bringing the situation to the attention of the Selective Service Administration, the Secretary of Agriculture declared:

"Assurance of adequate food supplies not only for the United States but, under the lend-lease act, for Great Britain and other nations resisting aggression, makes it necessary to increase substantially the production of pork, dairy products, eggs, poultry, dried beans, and vegetables; and at least to maintain the production of feed grains, fruits, beef, and lamb at the present levels."

Gen. Hershey ordered the letter circulated among the local boards, and added:

"The importance of agriculture in the national defense program cannot be overestimated. The most serious consideration will be given to the information contained in the . . . letter (from Wickard) . . . in examiing claims for occupation deferment by those engaged in agricultural pursuits."

Shortage Also in Maryland

A survey undertaken by the University of Maryland's department of agricultural economics and farm management, released Saturday, disclosed a shortage of 10,000 farm workers in Maryland as of April 1, with a probably shortage of 16,000 by July 1.

As far back as March the nearby agricultural counties of Fairfax, Va.; Montgomery and Prince Georges, Md., expressed concern over the increasing farm labor supply. In these counties the shortage has been created for the most part by labor demands of construction at Arlington Cantonment, Fort Belvoir, Fort Meade, Indianhead, and other nearby defense projects.

650 Tank Troops From Meade Await Call to Tennessee 'War'

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

On H hour of D day, which is some time between now and June 2, some 650 officers and men of the Army from the District, with 58 tanks, will roll westward into "war."

Mimic war though it will be, it will expose 77,000 soldiers to the seamy side of actual combat. There will be all the sweat and toil, all the sleeplessness and uncertain fare of war and all the secrecy.

That is why the Seventieth Tank Battalion only knows that it will leave Fort George G. Meade on H hour of D day for Middle Tennessee. When it will leave and when and where it will join the Second Army, what route it will take and how it will travel, are held strictly confidential.

Only General Headquarters troops in this immediate area, the Seventieth Tank Batttalion with its 58 light tanks, will be the only local unit involved in the June 2-June 28 maneuvers. To reach the neighborhood of Camp Forrest, near Murfreesboro, Tenn., it will travel 700 miles by rail, by road, or partly by road and partly by rail. The Army is not saying which.

Should the battalion go by road, its tanks would rumble across country. Their trip would be a demonstration of the light tank's ability to rush long distances to the battle zone and still be ready to fight.

Indications are that the Tennessee maneuvers, first in an impressive series of grea shaw battles in the East, will test machines and men to the final ounce of endurance. There will be no cream and gray barracks, no electric dishwashers, no draftettes to come out of evenings and help knit up the ravelled sleeve of care. This will be war in earnet, it seems—all of war except the killing.

In that case, thousands of selectees will taste Army life as it is for the first time. They will begin to learn, the hard way, that the soldier's trade is a tough one; that they are training for something inuniform.

finitely bigger than a picnic in

As one phase of this summer's maneuvers, the War Department announced yesterday that 2,400 "hams" in the Army Amateur Radio System will continue to function this summer for the first time in 15 years. Their first service test will come the night of June 2, coincident with the Tennessee maneuvers, when members of the system will endeavor to make as many contacts as possible with other amateurs affiliated with the Army.

Churchmen Widen Defense Aid Program

The Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capitol yesterday announced plans for meeting new church responsibilities brought about by the national emergency.

The committee voiced assurance that it will cooperate in any way possible, as determined by the executive committee, with official projects for the moral and spiritual benefit of service men.

The committee, it was announced, soon hopes to sponsor an institute through which stronger church cooperation can be conducted for some religious aspects of the present crisis.

Expansion of the committee's bureau of church information and programs for Washington's newcomers was shown in Secretary Henry C. Barden's report at a recent meeting. Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer gave an encouraging report of the finance committee that he heads. He is pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church. Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld outlined plans for the committee's Memorial Day broadcast.

Introduced as new members by Dr. Albert J. McCartney, chairman and presiding officer, were Dr. William R. Barnhart, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches; Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, and Dr. Henry W. Snyder, president of the Washington Lutheran Ministerial Association.

It was agreed to invite former Utah Senator William H. King to serve as special liaison representative for the Churches of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the Washington area.

The meeting was held at the residence of Rabbi Gerstenfeld on Oregon Avenue.

Cleric Urges U. S. Take Role Of Peacemaker

Holding that convoying of war aid to Britain under the American flag is a step toward war, Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder said last night that the Nation's first tasks beyond the Lend-Leasc Bill are hemispheric defense and role of world peacemaker.

Dr. Blackwelder, who is president of the Washington Federation of Churches, spoke in the evening before his Reformation Lutheran congregation near Capitol Hill on "America and the War."

Criticizing those who would go beyond the Lend-Lease Bill, the cleric said that "under the Lend-Lease Bill we did not promise delivery but we have the right to transfer necessary vessels to British registry and let them do the convoying under their flag.

Dr. Blackwelder, urging that President Roosevelt call a truce on the basis of Secretary Hull's five points laid down last Sunday night, said:

"It is as a servant and instrument of this kingdom (of God on this earth) that Mr. Roosevelt can be a man of destiny and the people of America will be with him to do that. We are not divided on that, but in shooting participation we are hopelessly divided."

Later in his message, Dr. Blackwelder voiced the belief that America can continue as a nation despite "repeated assertions that tyranny and freedom cannot live side by side in the same world."

"The answer is that 'they always have,'" he continued. "I despise tyranny, but tyranny and freedom have lived together on this planet for 2,000 years. It will take more than military might to prevent their continued existence side by side for years to come."

Brakeman Shot To Death on Stairs Of Rooming House

Lewis T. Karn, 29, of 1205 Gallatin Street Northwest, was shot to death early yesterday in a boarding house at 1527 Columbia Street Northwest.

Police found Karn lying on a stairway between the first and second floors. He had been shot in the back and the point of entrance of the bullet was considerably higher than the wound in his chest, indicating he had been fired upon while descending the stairs.

Coins were scattered about where he lay and his keyring, on which were the keys to his automobile, was clutched in his hand. The automobile was parked two doors from the house.

Fellow employes at the Washington Terminal Co., where Karn was a brakeman, said he had finished work Saturday night at 11:30 and left for home an hour later. Police were called to the Columbia Street house at 3 a. m. and Karn was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital ambulance surgeon.

Karn's brother and sister said he was a man of exemplary habits and suggested, police reported, that he might have been held up on his way home and forced to enter the house where he was shot when he resisted robbery.

Garden Parties Mark Festive Weekend

By Elizabeth Henney

IT WAS A LITTLE COOL FOR MAY in Washington yesterday, but so much warmer than it has been the last couple of days and so pleasant that Mr. and Mrs. Washington and all their families rushed out into the sunshine rejoicing. As a result the Capital kaeleidoscope formed ever-changing, ever-fascinating, ever-colorful patterns. To begin with it was May Queen Day in the churches and all afternoon starry-eyed little maids in bridal white on their way to ceremonies formed snowdrop patterns on the green landscape. Among the elect it was garden-party day and harassed officials paused in their tasks of beating plowshares into swords (or streamlined cars into armored tanks) and accompanied their brilliantly plumaged wives on a round of festivities.

In town and out-of-town garden parties held the spotlight on the social calendar and in nearby Virginia two exceptionally select and glamorous parties had the town talking. Mrs. Ralph Worthington entertained a house-warming at her newly built estate, River-Farm-on-the-Potomac, which is near Collingwood on the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway; and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse gathered in their friends at a mint julep party at their country home, Wolf-Trap Farm.

Mrs. Worthington's party was also in honor of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Norman C. Keith, who arrived in Washington Saturday night to visit her. Guests who had felt uncertain about where to turn off the main highway to get to the Worthington estate, were pleasantly surprised to find gay yellow wooden arrows with "Worthington" in large black letters, pointing the way for them from the highway, round the roads and up to the entrance. The house itself, of colonial red brick and topping a noble hill, had the latchstring of hospitality out for the guests, and a large symbolic brass key hung by the side of the door.

Hostess Receives On the Terrace

In the entrance hall, red rambling roses blossomed in cloissonne and French porcelain vases, through the vast drawing room permeated the fragrance from bowls of pink roses, the dining room was symphony in white, and the glassed-in conservatories were bowers of pastel flowers.

Most of the guests went straight through the hall and out onto the terraces, where a breathtaking view of sweeping terraces, rolling down through clusters of trees toward the Potomac below, lacked only flashing fountains to be a second Versailles. There on the terrace Mrs. Worthington received her guests. She was gowned in pastel lavender lace, fashioned street length over a matching satin slip. With it she wore a single strand of pearls and matching earrings. Mrs. Keith was gowned in pastel blue crepe, also street length and fashioned on simple lines.

"Practically everyone in Washington is here," observed one of the guests as he surveyed the throng; and indeed there seemed to be, hundreds of them anyway, on the terraces and in the garden, feasting to repletion on scotch and soda, champagne punch and cakes of all kinds.

Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Miss Elizabeth Howry, Mrs. Russell Sard, Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Griffin de Mauduit, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. Aldrich Dudley and Mrs. Mary MacArthur.

Noted among the guests during the afternoon were Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, gowned in navy blue with a white hat, talking to Mrs. Ferry Heath, who was a symphony in purple; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja (the latter in a gray frock with a white bird print pattern, and white accessories) deep in conversation with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Condon, the latter in a sage green outfit and a leghorn hat; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson being greeted on all sides . . . the Countess de Castellane, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Arthur Hadyn, Mr. and Mrs. George Renchard (she in brown and white print with brown accessories), Lady Chalkley and Mrs. William Arnold, all in gay groups on the terraces.

Still others there included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Miss Lydia Loring, the Baroness von Below, Mrs. John Rayburn, Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, Edward Van Devanter, George Abell, Edward Flather, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, accompanied by Mrs. Jean de Sibour, Mrs. Effingham Townsend and hundreds more.

Shouses Also Fete in Garden

Meanwhile the Shouses were having a merry party at Wolf Trap Farm, and it, too, was in the garden of the estate. Their party was in honor of their house guests, the famous Viennese diagnostician, Dr. Max Porges, and Mrs. Porges, who will return to New York tomorrow.

Their guests included Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Beale, of Philadelphia; Senator and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Senator and Mrs. Burton Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Davis (he is with the Mediation Board), Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Alice Longworth, Mrs. Arthur Woods, Governor and Mrs. Marriner Eccles, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, Frank Kemp, George Garrett, Maj. and Mrs. Robert Stewart-Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Childs, Mr. and Mrs. Redvers Opie, Mrs. Charles Adams Baker, Sir Quentin Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Claggett, former Senator and Mrs. Walter Edge, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, Walter Cummings, Capt. Charles Hammond, Maj. and Mrs. Howard Davidson, Turner Catledge, and hundreds more.

Teas Round Out Afternoon

Still other parties on yesterday afternoon's program were the tea given by Representative and Mrs. Clarence Lea and Representative and Mrs. Harry Englebright and the one given by Miss Margaret Delano Gage in her lovely "Old-Washington" red brick home at 4 Dupont Circle.

The party given by the Leas and Englebrights was in honor of new Representatives from California—Representative and Mrs. Ward Johnson and Representative and Mrs. Thomas Rolfe.

A great many of the guests were Californians and former Californians. Among those noted were Mayor Angelo Rossi, of San Francisco; Mr. and Mrs. John O'Toole (he is city attorney of San Francisco); Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Earl Lee Kelly, Miss Patricia Grady and many more.

On the cards for last evening were a number of dinners, before the program being sponsored by the Emergency Rescue Committee, which took place at the Shoreham Hotel. Among those entertained and who took their dinner guests onto the meeting were Mrs. Dean Acheson, who entertained in honor of William Shirer, radio correspondent, and Edgar Mowrer, American foreign correspondent; Mr. and Mrs. George Rublee, whose honor guests were Princess Sapieha the Polish authoress, and Count Carlo Sforza, former Italian Foreign Minister; and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot who honored Genevieve Tabouis, the French journalist, and Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman of the Rescue Committee.

Picnic Given By Clappers

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper entertained yesterday at luncheon at their home at 3125 Chain Bridge Road.

Hornbeck, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman W. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Lippmann.

The affair, given in informal fashion, was a picnic luncheon on the terrace of the house which overlooks Fort Kemble Park, and the menu included fried chicken and baked beans.

The former Minister of Panama, Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, and Senora de Alfaro, entertained yesterday afternoon in the second in a series of teas they are giving this season.

Senora de Alfaro received in the drawing room, and was gowned in a floor-length frock, fashioned on straight lines, of dusty rose crepe, with a blue trim. With it she wore an old-fashioned medallion of a cameo outlined with pearls.

The tea table in the dining room was centered with yellow roses and blue delphinium, and throughout the drawing room and on the terrace were large bowls of peonies.

Assisting during the afternoon were Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Mrs. William Wrightson, Mrs. John J. Hamilton, Mrs. Enrique Bentez, Mrs. W. T. Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

The tea and cocktail party which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yost gave last weekend was by way of being a bon voyage party for Mr. Yost, who is leaving very soon for the Philippines by clipper. Mr. Yost is assistant to Joseph C. Green, chief of the State Department's division of controls, and goes to the Philippines on a mission for the department.

Attractive Mrs. Joseph Green took her turn at pouring tea while she chatted with Mrs. William Chickering, whose husband, Col. Chickering, is bound for the Philippines with Mr. Yost. Also pouring tea was Mme. Alexandra Chramiec, whose husband was military attache at the Polish Embassy here before the war. Col. Chramiec left his wife and two little boys in Washington when he joined the Polish army fighting in France. Col. Chramiec is now with the Polish army in England, while his wife "carries on" in Washington, supporting herself and the children by giving French lessons.

Besides courage, Polish women have good looks. Pretty Mrs. Yost, who is Polish, was assisted in receiving the other afternoon by her two young sisters, Zossia and Lilka Rawicz-Oldakowska. The girls, who with Mrs. Yost share the typical Polish beauty of fair hair and green eyes, have found haven in Washington after the harrowing experiences of the invasion of Poland. Another Polish beauty was Countess Lasocka, who, escorted by Count Lasocki, was looking very smart in black and white lace topped by a small black hat swathed in a white veil.

Proving that good looks are by no means confined to Europe were Senora de Gazitua, wife of the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy, and Senora de Gouthier, wife of the Brazilan Second Secretary, both accompanied by their husbands.

A large number of the guests were Mr. Yost's colleagues from the State Department, among them Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Livesey, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Colt de Wolf, Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Wendelin—they will leave soon for his new post in the United States Embassy in Buenos Aires —and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hiss.

• • • •

Others representing the State Department were Mr. and Mrs. George Renchard—just in from a set of tennis and very chic in sports clothes—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page, Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey—she is a niece of the late Walton Moore—and Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky. Also present were several members of the British Embassy, among them Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, Mrs. Redvers Opie and Angus Malcolm.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell invited friends in for cocktails over the weekend to greet Philip Broadmead who is stopping in Washington with the Chauncey Parkers en route from China to his new post in Rio. It was not until he arrived in Washington that Mr. Broadmead learned that he will have his old friends, the Ian Wilson-Youngs, as colleagues at the British Legation in Rio. Lovely Charlotte Wilson-Young is ranking lady at the Legation as all of the men who outrank her husband are bachelors.

• • • •

Among those gathered at the Caswells the other afternoon were the Brazilian Ambassador, Julian Chetwynd, of the British Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. George Pettengill, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan and Mrs. Anthony Coleby. Also Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Edward Gardner, Glenn Abbey and a few more.

• • • •

Mrs. Caswell wore a tailored frock of a becoming shade of hydrangea blue and on each lapel she had pinned a fascinating gold brooch of her own designing. The brooches are conventionalized golden trees with miniature charms from Mrs. Caswell's charm bracelet dangling on the branches. Helping Mr. and Mrs. Caswell receive their guests was Mrs. Caswell's debutante daughter, Peggy Lansdowne, whose charm and poise make her equally as popular with her mother's friends as with her own young set.

Some Ways To Furnish Home Cheaply

MANY MODERN cynics tut-tut the idea that love is enough to get married on. While we concede that it does take money to live on, we do insist that it doesn't take much to be very happy on. Some of the most successful families we know have been raised on a shoe string, and plenty of rich families have been pretty awful flops.

So blessings on thee—young couples starting out with nothing much beside courage and faith and love. Those will stand you in far greater stead than dollars and cents, make no mistake about that. That's why we take such delight in answering letters from brides who have to start out modestly.

They Ask For a Plan

Take the problem of G. M., for instance, whose fiance doesn't make much money but has good prospects. They want to begin with one fine treasure for each room, build a new home around these, then add other good things later. But they don't know how to start. The new home will consist of a combination living-dining room, a bed-room, kitchen and bath. They ask us for a plan.

A very good idea, say we, but one that does take planning and a gay heart to carry out. Why not choose a handsome breakfront cabinet, of eighteenth century mahogany, for the nucleus of the living room furnishings—then arrange things so that all eyes will focus on it. Paper the walls in a smart big patterned design—that alone will be a big help in filling up the room. Use a day-bed or studio couch in place of a sofa for the present, making a cover of cotton tweed in a color predominating in the wall paper—light green let's say.

Paint Them Light Green

For lamp tables, buy small unpainted chests and paint them in this same light green—later they can be used in a bedroom. If a rug can be managed, get a pale green twist weave broadloom; if not, leave the floor bare and keep it beautifully polished. Finish with curtains of sheer white net or marquisette, a pair of lamps with dark brown bases and brown shades, extra odd cushions of dark brown, perhaps needlepoint, accents of the wedding silver. For dining, a nice mahogany bridge table (not folding) and Ducan Phyfe chairs, would be first choice. If that can't be managed for the present, get an unpainted outdoor trestle table and benches, smooth them with sandpaper and paint them light green. (To use on the porch later.)

For the bedroom, let the big investment be a bed with fine mattress and springs—a poster, perhaps, or else a pair of twin beds with upholstered headboards. An unpainted chest, or an old one, painted white to match the walls and a bouffant dressing table skirt of white organdy would help furnish the room. For spread and curtains, use cretonne, flowered with big cabbage roses on a white ground.

Look 'Peasant' on Warm Days to Come

"How would you like to go up in a swing? Up in a swing so high—" wearing this peasant-like play dress. Wherever you do your playing this summer, it is smart to look pleasant. This little square-neck, full-skirted dress of cotton chambray is a typical outfit. It comes in natural color, blue or yellow. The peasant embroidery about the neck, midriff and on the pockets is of contrasting colors with red predominating. The full, casual cut of the dress makes it comfortable on the hottest days.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 29, Lives Alone and Loves It; But When She Talks With Persons She Doesn't Know Well Her Heart Pounds and Her Limbs Tremble; Why?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl, 29, live alone and love it. I am a fair musician and write poetry when the occasion seems to require it. But there is a sad difficulty. I don't know how to make friends, and the experience of meeting people is a nerve-tearing ordeal. Some of the few persons with whom I have become good friends have told me that until they really knew me, they were chilled with my snobbishness. I am not snobbish. If I seem stand-offish, it is purely a manifestation of painful shyness and silly fear—which always overtake me when I get very far out of seclusion.

Psychologists—with whose written views I am acquainted—advise active participation in clubs, church work, outdoor sports, etc., for such as I. And these activities are all part of my routine—but the difficulty persists. I don't know how to talk to people; how to interest myself in their concerns, or even how to make casual conversation with those having the slightest authority where I work. If I try to talk with someone whom I don't know well, but would like to know better, my heart pounds. I begin to tremble and no doubt present a very sorry spectacle.

This seems a ridiculous confession, coming from someone who has been given every advantage that devoted parents could provide. However, my realization that a lot of it must be due to self-centeredness, and childish cowardice doesn't give me the cue to the remedy. Therefore, I shall be very grateful for any helpful suggestions you may be able to provide. Sincerely, D. W. T.

Unschooled in Logic Of Normal Behavior

DEAR D. W. T.: If your problem consists simply, of "not knowing how to talk to people, how to interest yourself in their concerns, etc." you should be able to master it, in due time, by academic application and plain hard work. In the field of academic application, you might study, for instance, Dade Carnegie's book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," and Dr. Donaud Laird's book, "Why We Don't Like People." During and after studying these books, you would need to discipline yourself to the plain hard work aforementioned, of weaving the tested theories of these experts into the pattern of your social behavior.

Don't make the pseudo-intellectual's mistake of curling your nose at the mention of such books as these. Filled to the brim they may be with hearty exposition of the allegedly obvious—but persons like yourself, who haven't mastered rudiamentary social techniques, need to study and to practice the philosophy and concrete suggestions they so thoughtfully provide. One famous psychiatrist is quoted, indeed, as saying that writings of the Dale Carnegie type do more good than all the psychiatric lore as yet recorded, for the reason that such "self-help" books reach millions of men and women who need persuasive instruction in the logic and mechanics of popularly acceptable, personally satisfying social behavior, yet would never think of appealing to a psychologist or psychiatrist for it.

Another excellent book of this type is Marjorie Barstow Greenbie's "Be Your Age," in which the cheerily sophisticated author lists in a sort of sliding scale, the social attitudes and accomplishments which make for well-rounded personality in adolescence, young adulthood, middle age, full maturity, etc. Robustly realistic in her outlook on life, Mrs. Greenbie breathes into her discussion a philosophical view of humanity so liberal, knowledgable and balanced as to do away—in one grand sweep—with any pre-existing notions, in the reader's mind, that provincialism, prudery, gaucherie, etc., have any place in the civilized adult's creed or conduct.

Years ago, Mrs. Greenbie wrote another book—one of her first, I believe—titled "Personality," which is likewise a genially sophisticated, richly instructive short course in the art of capitalizing one's good points and minimizing the poor ones. Her books should be particularly helpful to you, inasmuch as your difficulty likely inheres in lack of sophistication—which is to say, lack of realistic knowledge of life, on the social, intellectual and emotional fronts.

Those nervous tremors which have you gasping like a fish out of water, whenever you make a social effort in a new direction, suggest that you are terrifically "bottled up," emotionally,—perhaps for lack of suitors, romance, recreation happily and casually shared with the opposite sex, and that "group" acceptance usually reserved for the woman who gets along well with men. Your supposed fear of people undoubtedly boils down to some obsessive fear or distrust of self in relation to people, maybe primarily to men.

Psychiatric analysis of the neurosis would be one way of getting rid of it, since correct diagnosis is half of cure. The other way, of course, consists in behaving normally, despite the fear; if that can be managed. Because, as the psychologists tell us, emotion follows action, and one may actually become, in time, the sort of person one consistently represents one's self to be. As Shakespeare said, "Assume a virtue, if you have it not;"—and by and by, that virtue will be truly yours. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Verdict

She—Well, what do you think of it?

He—What?

She—My new hat.

He—Or—er, well, it's all right.

She—You mean you don't like it?

He—I didn't say I didn't like it.

She—You don't, just the same. Now just what's the matter with it?

He—I didn't say anything was the matter with it. It's all right.

She—Well, everywhere I went they said this shape was to be all the thing for summer.

He—I see.

She—And I simply went to every store in town and I couldn't find anything I'd appear on the streets in——

He—Um huh.

She—As a matter of fact, this is a very conservative size in comparison with most of the hats.

He—What are you making such a fuss about it for? It's all right.

She—Are you sure you like it?

He—It's a very nice hat—of it's kind.

She—But you don't think it looks well on me?

He—I didn't say that at all.

She—Well, there's something the matter. Of course I know it doesn't look so well with this suit. Wait now till I hold up my print dress . . . Now is it any better?

He—I couldn't tell without I saw it on. I've told you a hundred times I can't imagine how things look on women.

She—Well, the whole thing is, you just don't like the hat!

He—I told you it was all right.

She—Well, of course, I could always take these flowers off and put on a bow or something . . . And I could have the brim cut down——

He—I wouldn't worry. It's all right.

She—I wish you'd come right out and tell me what you think of it. Just tell me honestly——

He—Now I'm not going to say another thing. I always get in trouble when I make any comment on your hats.

She—I knew you didn't like it! Now just what's the matter?

He—No, I made up my mind the last time when you got so mad I'd never again make any remarks about your clothes.

She—I didn't get mad at all . . . Now do you really think this hat looks awful on me?

He—Not exactly awful, but—no, I'm not going to say anything about it! You'll be all mad or crying around here——

She—Why I won't at all! I can always take criticism. Now just what's the trouble with it?

He—Well, for one thing, it's not your hat.

She—But they're all wearing this kind——

He—I can't help that. You asked me for criticism on this hat, didn't you?

She—Another thing, what you call "my" hats are always at least $25. This is simply the best I could do on what I could spend. I'd just like to see you do any better——

He—There you go! I knew I shouldn't have said anything!

She—No, really, I want to know what's the matter with the hat.

He—Oh, it's a good enough hat. It would be very nice on a picnic.

She—Picnic! Why, they're all wearing this kind of hat everywhere!

He—I don't care what they're doing. I say that's nothing but a picnic hat, and what's more it looks cheap and common on you—

She—So that's what you think of me!

He—There you go getting personal! What I mean is the hat's unsuitable for you. You need something—well—er a little neater, with more dignity——

She—Dignity! So you think I'm an old woman, do you?

He—Now that's not the point—

She—I know what you think! You don't think I look good in any kind of clothes!

He—There you go!

She—You think I'm so plain and old-fashioned I can't wear any new style. Well, if I'm so awful looking why did you ever marry me——

He—I know it! I knew it!

Make Novel Barrel Chair

"YES, I was a barrel once!" A clever chair announces boldly.

How did I rise in life? You can easily work the trick yourself; from an old potato or sugar barrel you can make a smart chair for your porch, game room or summer cottage.

On the barrel mark off with chalk the height you want the seat to be. Then you or the "carpenter" of the family can saw along this line, being careful to leave hoops in place.

Before cutting hoops nail them to remaining staves and tack a piece of tin around inside of barrel to reinforce back.

To support the seat, saw off some blocks of wood to reach from seat and bottom of barrel. The seat itself you make by fastening planks together with cleats. For "solid comfort," tack padding of old chair or blanket to inside back and seat.

Now for the upholstery, which might be a colorful plaid gingham. Cut a piece for the back to extend around the widest part and fit at top and bottom with darts. Tack in place with ornamental tacks. Cover seat padding, too, and make a round gingham cushion.

How to make this barrel chair—and other clever things from odds and ends—is described in detail in our 40-page booklet, "How to Make Furnishings for Your Home." Includes Victorian whatnot, bedspreads and matching dressing tables, packing-box ottoman, many more.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Make Furnishings for Your Home," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of the Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Revolution in U. S. Diet Forecast in Two Years

By Ida Jean Kain

IT IS MY prediction that in the next two years there will be a greater change in our habits of eating than it was possible to bring about in the three preceding decades of dietetics.

We are beginning to realize that nutrition exerts a powerful influence on the destiny of a nation. By close attention to diet, the family unit can be given buoyant health and nervous stability and can be made more alert and aggressive.

Certainly, we are entering a new era in nutrition. Science is making such rapid strides that the vitamins—once obscure—can now be counted in food portions and the day's menus planned to meet the standard requirement for all ages.

This is "Vitamin Week" for the readers of this column, and during the next few days I shall try to give you the high points about each of these elements, the newly standardized requirements, and the units supplied by the food-rich sources. Through careful food selection you can triple your family's vitamin intake without spending more money than usual.

Vitamin A is first on the list. Without enough A, you may have to grope for your seat in the dim light of the theater, or have difficulty in driving in the twilight, or in seeing the road against the glare of approaching headlights. Vitamin A is necessary for the regeneration of the visual purple in the retina of the eye. Unless your requirements are met, there is not enough speed in the adaptation of the vision to changes from light to dark.

There is also a direct relationship between the vitamin A intake and tooth protection. Plenty of A will help you to hang on to your second set of teeth.

According to the latest scientific consensus, vigorous health demands that viatmin A be furnished as follows: Adults, 5,000 international units; adolescent girls, 5,000; boys, 6,000; children from 6 to 11, 3,000; children from 1 to 5, 2,000; infants under 1, 1,500; expectant mothers, 6,000; nursing mothers, 6,000 international units.

The international units furnished by food-rich sources of vitamin A are given in the following list:

FOODS.	PORTION.	UNITS.	CALORIES.

Peas, cooked	½ cup	500	50
Potatoes, sweet, in skin	1, large	3,100	200
Spinach, cooked, chopped	½ cup	9,250	20

Tomatoes, fresh	1, medium	900	25
Tomatoes, canned	½ cup	725	25
Turnip greens, cooked	½ cup	4,275	30

Either clip and file these lists or send a stamped return envelope, large size, to Room 600, the Promotion Dept. of The Washington Post, for the new "Count Your Vitamins" chart, a compact reference which will prove invaluable to the health-minded homemaker.

Sleep Study Shows Heart Is Clairvoyant

Charlottesville, Va., May 25.—A hitherto unknown property of the human heart—its ability to anticipate the body movements of a sleeping person by as much as six minutes—was reported at the University of Virginia today.

Minter M. Jackson, graduate associate in the psychology laboratory, made the discovery accidentally while measuring the movements of sleepers for number, duration and frequency during a normal period of night sleep.

On an electrical apparatus connected by chest electrodes to the subject, Jackson measured the sleep motility of a number of persons and found that normal individuals take a considerable amount of "exercise" while resting.

The group averaged 65 movements—14 of them major shifts of the body and the balance arm, leg or head movements—all nicely charted by ink on a moving paper tape.

But unexpectedly, in studying the graphs on which the heartbeats as well as body movements were recorded, he found that the heartbeat not only increased with the exertion at the time of the movement but invariably anticipated it.

For example, the tape told the tale of a sleeper whose heart rate—for no apparent reason—began increasing from the normal sleeper's 63 a minute to about 66 within five and a half minutes. In the final half minute before the sleeper moved the rise was precipitate to 88.8 just at the time of the movement.

After the shift of position the drop in heart rate was even more active. Within 30 seconds the beats were timed at 61 a minute and came back to the normal 63 very slowly.

A partial explanation for the phenomena was seen in the fact that pressure or congestion of a section of the body such as from pressing against a hard mattress often steps up the heart rate, as does warming the skin.

This would probably account for the slow rise during the first five and a half minutes. But no congestion or body chemical known could increase the rate by nearly 20 beats that was noted in the final half-minute before the body movement.

The thought was therefore advanced that some deepseated nervous or mental factor sent the heart rate skipping away above normal and then compensated for it by sending it below normal.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

OPM Drafts LeMasters Promotion Plan for U. S.

Some sort of uniform administrative promotion plan to cover all Federal employes will be made effective on July 1. This is the plan of Congressional leaders. The Budget Bureau's promotion plan has been approved by the House Civil Service Committee and it's on the House calender. Chairman Ramspeck is reported to have been told that unless Congress approves the bill within the next few weeks that a rider will be put onto the deficiency appropriation bill which will regulate Federal employe promotions during the 1942 fiscal year.

Members of the powerful House Appropriations Committee are determined that Federal employes shall be treated alike and that they shall be covered under a single promotion plan. No appropriation bill approved at this session carried a proviso that regulates promotions. In other words, unless some plan is made effective before July 1, the agencies will be free to give administrative raises to all their employes.

The record shows that some agencies will be liberal and others tight. Employes and morale suffer under the slap-happy system. Chairman Ramspeck is expected to request a rule to get the uniform pay plan on the House floor. The plan, which would give thousands of employes automatic pay raises either every 18 months (for low-paid employes) or 30 months (for higher-paid employes), will be passed easily once it gets consideration. It's not at all improbable that the appropriations comimttee will write the budget promotion plan into the last deficiency bill. In that case the provision could be knocked out by a single objection from the House floor. The committee prefers, of course, that special legislation be enacted.

A highly restrictive administrative promotion plan is now in effect. A dozen agencies such as FHA, RFC, USHA, WPA and many more are prohibited by law from giving their employes grade promotions. Other agencies can give their employes promotions under certain extreme conditions. Agriculture is one of these but apparently it isn't using the funds earmarked for promotions. In an unprecedented memo, Personnel Director Roy Hendrickson has told bureau chiefs to recommend immediately employes for administrative promotions to the extent of funds available. War, Navy, CAA and Maritime Commission have denounced the promotion plan now in effect.

Employes Due July 1

Examinations for alphabetic card-punch operator, under card-punch operator, junior and under tabulating machine operator and junior and under alphabetic tabulating machine operator were announced yesterday by the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Salaries are: Junior tabulating machine operator, $1,440; under tabulating machine operator, $1,260; junior alphabetic tabulating machine operator, $1,440, and under alphabetic tabulating machine operator, $1,260.

History repeats itself. During the World War the Government sought far and long for a sufficient number of these workers. Now the same need reoccurs.

Main difference between the examinations announced now and similar ones announced last year here is that the 1941 examinations will be of the unassembled type. Ratings will be assigned on the basis of the extent and quality of experience as determined by the applicant's sworn statements and by corroborative evidence.

Congress has approved a bill that will permit the War, Navy and Coast Guard to pay time and a half for overtime to its field employes. Double time will be paid those employes who forego vacations. For some unexplained reason, War won't be able to pay employes in Washington who work during their vacations but Navy can under the bill . . . Agriculture retirements: Iola Armstrong, Herbert Marshall, Harriet Jarmain, Charles Squire, Cora Carson and William Groome . . . An estimated 330 civilian guards will be hired to guard Navy yards and establishments under the House approved bill. The House added a provision which requires that the guards must be taken from Civil Service registers . . . AGO's delegates to the AFGE convention: Harry Keller, Carroll Dimond, Ed McGinnis, George Green and Minnie Brewer.

"I wanted to pave my garage floor," Marquardt said.

Three Faiths Do Homage To War Dead

Pre-Memorial Day Services Bring Pleas to Preserve 'American Way'

Followers of three faiths yesterday did homage to their war dead at pre-Memorial Day services dominated by sermon pleas for preservation of the "American way" against forces of war and disunity.

The annual Knights of Columbus' field mass at Arlington Amphitheater, the Military Order of the World War's massing of the colors at Washington Cathedral, the city-wide Jewish rites at Chev Sholom Cemetery, as well as scores of other services, drew thousands of worshipers.

Members of about 100 patriotic, military and religious organizations were among the 8,000 people at the Cathedral service, where the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox were principal speakers.

Compares U. S. to France

The prelate declared that "America is not conscious of the fact that there are 1,500,000 men in camps here and that nothing is being done for their moral well-being or spiritual health," and compared the Nation to France before its downfall.

"We are self-assured, smug and conceited; we are taking it sitting down," he said.

Brig. Gen. Cox, who is director of District Selective Service, said that America must "either throw its strength to the cause of man's freedom or, by withholding it, aid the cause of man's enslavement."

"We Americans," he asserted, "desire no part of any kind of appeasement and are fully determined to preserve the Christian, the Democratic, the American way of life."

1,500 Knights Attend

Before 1,500 knights and representatives of 66 other national and local organizations at Arlington, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., described the Catholic Church as "the basis, guardian and last bulwark of democracy." He is vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its Foreign Service School.

Warning that "every modern Caesar will first seek to annihilate the Catholic Church if he will annihilate democracy," Father Walsh called it "the only spiritual concept of essential brotherhood and of identical origin and common destiny that justifies democracy as a workable system of civilized living."

The Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, D. D., Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond and Titular Bishop of Cime, celebrated pontifical mass, then blessed the wreaths that were later placed on the Unknown Soldier's Tomb by the organizations' representatives.

Acting for the Knights were Francis P. Matthews, of New Haven, Conn., supreme knight of the national body; Daniel J. Callahan, of Washington, supreme treasurer, and Alfred A. McGarraghty, State deputy.

Luncheon Honors Bishop

Following the mass, Bishop Ireton was tendered a testimonial luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

More than 500 worshipers attending the Ohev Sholom services, sponsored by the Jewish War Veterans and its Ladies' Auxiliary, heard Representative Raymond S. Springer (Republican), of Indiana, stress that continued loyalty and allegiance to the flag is the best tribute that can be paid the war dead.

Worshipers sang "America" and the "Star-Spangled Banner" under the leadership of Abrasha Robofsky, of Washington Hebrew Congregation. They were accompanied by the United States Army Band. Remarks were made by Commander Frank D. Norton, of the Vincent Costello Veterans Post, and Nat S. Silverburg, commander of Washington Post, No. 58, Jewish War Veterans of the United States.

Vaughn Memorial Service

Many other religious and patriotic organizations sponsored pre-Decoration Day services here yesterday.

The Vaughn Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church, among the oldest and largest Bible classes in the world, held its annual memorial service for the class founder, Frances W. Vaughn, at Rock Creek Cemetery. The Cabin John Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution were special guests at morning rites at Potomac (Md.) Methodist Church. Local Daughters of America attended evening services at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

Federation's Meeting Put Off to June 7

The regular monthly meeting of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, scheduled for next Saturday, has been postponed until June 7, it was announced yesterday.

'We Are Fat and Soft and Rich, a Perfect Prize for Hitler,' Says Secretary Ickes

Six Speakers Warn Against Complacency, Indifference in U. S.

Six speakers, including Secretary of the Interior Ickes, last night joined in warning Americans against "complacency" that makes them unmindful of the aid they can render the oppressed victims of Nazi domination in Europe.

Count Carlo Sforza, former Italian Ambassador to France; Edgar Ansel Mowrer, foreign correspondent; Princess Paul Sapieha, author of the best-selling "Polish Profile;" Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, French journalist, and Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman of the Emergency Rescue Committee, were those who joined in an appeal to bring citizens of the European democracies to this country.

They addressed nearly 500 persons at the Shoreham Hotel at a gathering sponsored by the Washington Committee of the Emergency Rescue Committee, Inc. Mrs. Roosevelt headed the list of sponsors.

"We're Soft," Says Ickes

Secretary Ickes, who served as chairman, told the gathering:

"We are fat and soft and rich, a perfect prize for Hitler to capture and truss and roast before a slow fire. Oh, yes, we are for aid to Britain, but we are also for 100 per cent, or at least 80 per cent, business as usual, and we don't want to be interrupted while a world series is on."

Count Sforza declared that "There is nobody in Italy who is mystified by the slogans of this war. They know that in any case Italy is going to be defeated, because a German victory will mean that Italy becomes a colony of Germany."

Two slogans destroyed liberty in France, he said, They were: "We have the most splendid army in the world;" and "We have the Maginot Line," he added. He warned America not to fall into the complacency that marked France before its fall.

"This is no purely national struggle," said Mowrer. "It's a religious war. We owe far more to the Greeks and the Chinese who are dying for liberty than we do to the Americans who are siding with totalitarian methods here at home."

Of those citizens of the conquered countries who are seeking asylum in the United States he said, "These are no aliens, these victims of fascism. They ask only to fight in the ranks beside us."

Nearly 500 persons have thus far been aided in an escape from France by the committee, Dr. Kingdon said in a brief appeal for funds.

Intellectuals Aided

"America is still a magic word in the imaginations of men," he declared. "America is a word of hope and strength and life to hundreds of thousands in the darkness of Europe."

He said that those who have been aided in their escape to these shores have been "the writers, the thinkers, the people who have been known for their leadership against the Nazis. Every one of them has earned the right to be helped because he has carried the fight against fascism across the years."

It costs $350 to get one refugee from Marseilles to the United States, he said. The administrative costs of the committee are 14 per cent of the total funds received, he added.

"A deep-seated conviction of security has made us lose our instinct for danger," Princess Paul Sapieha told the audience. She is a native American who married a Polish aristocrat several years ago.

Mme. Tabouis declared that "the best soldiers for democracy are these people whom the committee will save. We are on the front line here."

She quoted from the letter of a friend in occupied France, describing the anguish of those held in concentration camps.

"This is a spiritual war, dividing the world into two camps," she said.

Chorus Recital Ends Mormon Conference

"Come, Come, Ye Saints"—the song that cheered the Mormon pioneers on their trek from Illinois to Utah—rang through the Washington Chapel of Latter Day Saints here last night, as a music festival climaxed a two-day Washington Stake (Diocese) Conference.

The famous hymn that Pioneer William Clayton composed was rendered by the combined choirs of the Washington Stake under the direction of J. Spencer Cornwall, conductor of the noted Tabernacle Choir of Salt Lake City. Accompanists for the program were D. Sterling Wheelwright, chapel organist and choir director, and Mrs. Frances Berrett.

Earlier in the day, the worshipers from Maryland, the District and Virginia heard Elder George Albert Smith, member of the Mormon Church's Quorum of Twelve Apostles, in his addresses plead for "putting spiritual and temporal houses in order" for an "unpredictable future."

Mormon young men of Selective Service age gathered for a special meeting on Saturday night, when Elder Smith and other officials warned of the moral problems that would be faced, and urged them to hold fast to their ideals.

D. C. Grocer Kills Robber In Ambush

Delicatessen Owner, Once a Victim, Lies In Wait for Intruder, A 16-Year-Old Youth

Biagio Ambrogi, 46, delicatessen owner, once robbed and fearing another holdup, ambushed and killed John Clark, 16, colored, Shaw Junior High School student, of 1607 Fifth Street Northwest, when the latter broke into Ambrogi's store, at Rhode Island Avenue and Twelfth Street Northwest, about 4 a. m. yesterday, police reported.

Meanwhile, more successful criminals got away with $1,827 early yesterday, police said. A safe at the Fort Davis Bowling Alley, Alabama and Pennsylvania Avenues Southeast, was cracked and $727 were taken. Rings valued at $725 were stolen from Kathryn Rivercomb, Covington, Va., who was staying at 1903 N Street Northwest. Two pocketbooks containing $356 in bills were stolen from 1725 Varnum Street Northwest.

Ambrogi, who hid in the store with a friend, told police the youth broke the glass of the front door, and walked toward the bread counter where they were waiting. Ambrogi drew a pistol, police were told, ordered "hands up," and that he fired when the youth moved his hand toward a back pocket.

The boy fled, Ambrogi followed and fired again. Police reported the youth died in Freedmen's, with two bullet wounds. Ambrogi was held for action of the coroner, at the Twelfth Precinct Station. He told police his store had been robbed of $85 some time ago.

Lutherans Honor Nurses' Heroine

The birth of Florence Nightingale 121 years ago was marked last night when the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, 907 Maryland Avenue Northeast, entertained the Lutheran nurses of Washington at a supper and at vesper services.

Florence Nightingale was trained at a Lutheran Nursing Home in Germany, the Rev. J. Harold Mumper, pastor of the church, pointed out at the supper. In his sermon, "Buying the Truth," he declared that "the sale of moral truths is one of the fundamental causes of the troubles in the world today."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Screens to Be Lighted By Many Bright Stars

"Names," Technicolor and Musicals at Loew's; National's Subscription Season Nears Record; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THOSE LOEW PEOPLE are bragging again. Returning to the squirrel cage of a Sabbath afternoon, one finds his desk bogged down with announcements of this and that, all of which seems to augur well for future weeks on E Street.

BELL

There is the matter of stars, for example. Joan Crawford, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Robert Taylor, Spencer Tracy, Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon, Lana Turner—it seems a little odd to find her name up here in the top brackets—Clark Gable, Rosalind Russell, Eleanor Powell, Wallace Beery and Jeanette MacDonald, all from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot, incidentally, are among the biggies headed for local screens.

Joan Crawford is reported to have scored the hit of her life in "A Woman's Face," a picture unlike any in which she heretofore has been seen. Powell and Loy will be husband and wife again in "Love Crazy." Spencer Tracy, just having completed "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," with Ingrid Bergman and Lana Turner as his leading women, now is in Florida on location making "The Yearling." Robert Taylor's next will be "Billy the Kid" and Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon will costar in "Blossoms in the Dust." For the others, Gable and Russell in "Unholy Partners;" Eleanor Powell and Ann Sothern in "Lady Be Good;" Wallace Beery, back on the waterfront, in "Barnacle Bill," and Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond, her husband in private life, in "Smilin' Thru."

Then there is the matter of Technicolor. We have long contented that for the complete capture of realism all pictures should be made in Technicolor. It seems to be working gradually around to that. Twentieth Century-Fox goes in for the more vivid hues in "Blood and Sand," with Tyrone Power as the matador. On the quieter side are the tints in "Blossoms in the Dust," with a reversion to the stronger color treatment in "Billy the Kid." Two other technicolor subjects also are in work at M.-G.-M., "The Yearling" and "Smilin' Thru," with Twentieth Century-Fox splashing pigments all over the screen in their forthcoming "Moon Over Miami," starring Betty Grable. Betty, all by herself, is complete justification of Technicolor.

Another Condensed Musical On Way

We might as well wind these bulletins up in a bunch while we are at it. So, "Crazy With the Heat," recent Broadway musical comedy hit, will be coming along to the air-cooled Capitol at precisely the time Washington will be "crazy with the heat"—unless this is going to be a chilly summer. That would be along about the middle of July. Willie Howard, veteran comedy star, heads the cast. Surrounding him are Mary Raye and Naldi, noted dance team; Diosa Costello, another of those Latin-American "bombshells"—as the Capital already knows—and a chorus of 20 presumably beautiful girls. This will constitute the stage bill, in conjunction with the usual picture, at no advance in admission charges. "Crazy With the Heat" played at $3.30 in New York.

Bess Davis Schreiner, subscription sales manager for the Theater Guild-American Theater Society, is slightly maudlin over the prospects for the 1941-42 season at the National. New and old subscribers are piling their application blanks in so fast that Miss Schreiner hardly can see out from under. The orchestra already offers the best opportunities for desirable seat locations. The present outlook is that the balconies will be some 2,000 oversubscribed. Now then, the deadline for renewal of last season's subscriptions is June 1. After that, the options not taken up will be sold to new applicants. Let your conscience, etc.

Another Record Goes by Board

Anything can happen in the theater. No one ever thought "Abie's Irish Rose's" New York long-record run could be broken. Then along came "Tobacco Road." Similarly, it was a foregone conclusion that Frank Bacon's Chicago run of 65 weeks in "Lightnin'" would stand as an all-time record. So along comes "Life With Father" and scraps it with 66 weeks. Lillian Gish and Percy Waram were the stars of the Chicago cast. Howard Lindsay and Dorothy Stickney are in the nineteenth month of the original company's run in the Empire Theater, New York, and Dorothy Gish and Louis Calhern, in a third company, are closing a record-breaking Philadelphia run on Saturday night to go into the Cass Theater, Detroit, for the summer. The piece bids fair to be a hit.

There are still some acting opportunities lying around. The Players Club of Central Community Center need two men of military bearing to play the Italian and Austrian generals in "After Wimpole Street." Tryouts at Central High School, Wednesday evening at 8. With every role cast for the summer, the Cross Roads Theater needs one child actor who can play a 12-year-old boy. He probably will be cast in two bills. Those interested should address the Cross Roads Theater, Bailey's Cross Roads, Va.

Voice-from-Back-of-the-Hall Note

What are you doing, mister, running a booking agency?

ANN MILLER,
after scoring as the plump, burlesque ballerina in "You Can't Take It With You," then streamlining herself and registering a smash hit in "Too Many Girls," was expected to soar immediately to the cinema heights as one of the screen's foremost dancers. And nothing has been heard of her since. This, of course, is something to be submitted to the puzzle department

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 25 (INS).—I have often wondered why Margaret Tallichet hasn't done something more important in the movies. She is so very pretty and so sweet. Well, my friend Joe Pasternak is going to see that Margaret gets her chance in "Almost An Angel," the next Deanna Durbin picture. He tells me that Henry Koster, the director, says her tests are beautiful and he feels she is a find. She has the biggest part of her career—the second femme lead.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Deanna, who started recording this past week, Charles Laughton, Bob Cummings and Margaret will give this movie distinction from the acting standpoint.

Prepare for a surprise! Monta Bell, well-known director and producer, and Olga Lee, a non-professional, were married six weeks ago in Las Vegas. Nary a word leaked out until today, when some of Monta's associates on the Paramount lot, heard of his marriage and wondered how he had been able to keep it a secret. Well, Monta married under his real name of Louis M. Bell and gave his mother's address in Glendale.

The fiction market is leaner than it has been in years, according to Kenneth McKenna, M.-G.-M. story editor, just back from New York. Many important writers—Robert Sherwood, Sam Spewack and others—are writing non-fiction and devoting their time to the government. Kenneth believes that M.-G.-M. will, contrary to their usual practice, buy originals and that publishers will develop junior writers during the world crisis.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Phyllis Ruth, pint cup size, celebrating Bert Wheeler's return at Bill Jordan's Bar of Music; Maris Wrixen, in "Million Dollar Baby," is soon to have one of her own—a baby I mean. She is married to Rudy Fehr, film editor; Dierdre Conselman, daughter of the late Bill Conselman the well known scenario writer, is on her way to Chicago to marry Don Budge, tennis champion.

Bert Lahr's pals are tossing a big cocktail party for him Sunday at Mike Romanoffs. It's Bert's first visit here in two years and everyone will be glad to see him; Townsend Netcher and Bonnie Edwards, a devoted Beverly Tropics twosome; Sybil and Harry Brand left at the crack of dawn on a vacation trip to Sun Valley. They stop for a day or so at Las Vegas; the Charles Vandas celebrate their fifth wedding anniversary with a barbecue picnic at their ranch.

Loretta Young and Tom Lewis plan a two-month boat trip when she finishes her current movie at Columbia; sorry I had to miss the opening of Hollywood Park.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Leonard Lyons:

New York, May 25.

A FAREWELL DINNER was given for Col. Ralph Royce, who recently was promoted, and who will fly to Britain shortly in connection with the administration of the Lend-Lease plan. . . . Col. Royce, who once had worked with Ambassador Winant, went to the British Embassy a few days ago to arrange for the necessary documents. He was told that he would leave from "somewhere in Canada"—as a passenger in an American-made bomber destined for England. . . . "By the way," the embassy officials asked him, "are there many men named Royce in America?" . . . "There are a few," Col. Royce replied. . . . "I mentioned it," the official told him, "because the Flight Commander for the trip also is named Royce—Ralph Scot Royce. Isn't that a coincidence?" . . . "Yes, and what a coincidence," said the surprised Col. Royce. "He's my son."

LEONARD LYONS

JUSTICE FERDINAND PECORA will relinquish his summer vacation this year. He'll spend his time touring the country and organizing chapters in each city for the new American League for Unity and Action. . . . Artie Shaw is readying his newest enterprise, a 52-piece American orchestra, which will play all native music, only at concerts—and not for dancing. The billing will read "Artie Shaw and His American Orchestra." . . . Katharine Hepburn is taking singing lessons now. . . . Joe Losey is producing a film for the Nelson Rockefeller Committee, for distribution in South America. It will show typical Americans at work, at play and at rest—so that our Good Neighbors can see what we look like.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, the playwright who once was a pacifist, and who opposed the reelection of Franklin D. Roosevelt last fall, sent a wire to the White House. It reads: "We ought to shoot now, Mr. President—we can see the whites of their eyes!"

WHEN LEO T. McCAULEY, the Irish Consul, appeared before the Overseas Press Club, the officers of the club examined the entire membership list, to find a true Celt to introduce the guest of honor. They selected Brian O'Brian, editor of the American Weekly, who had the most Irish name on the list. Mr. O'Brian made the introduction—but explained that he's not Irish but a British subject. . . . McCauley, in his speech, stated that although the official name of his country is "Eire," it is not incorrect to refer to it as "Ireland." . . . "'Eire' is correct only when you speak Gaelic," he explained, "and 'Ireland' is correct when you speak English."

AL LACKEY tells the story of a community of farmers whose parched lands were suffering from the drought. They engaged a journeyman preacher who, for a stipulated fee, agreed to produce the precious rain. . . . He mounted a hill, and then shrieked to the heavens: "Rain, oh give us rain, Almighty One." . . . The rain descended, in torrents, and continued—day and night—for almost five months. The floods began to sweep away the farm-houses and ruined the possibility of harvest. And so they engaged the same journeyman preacher who, for another fee, agreed to stop the rain. . . . He mounted the same hill. "Five months ago," he shrieked to the heavens, "I asked for rain." He spread wide his arms, pointed to the devastation of the floods, and then shrugged: "I asked for rain, but by Jiminy—this is ridiculous."

JOHN STEINBECK has presented to his wife the ledgers and composition-books in which he wrote, in longhand, "The Grapes of Wrath." . . . Gene Towne told Hollywood's most unresponsive lady: "How many ice-cubes do you make in that refrigerator?" . . . When the President appoints his Transport Coordinator, the man selected will not be one who is associated with railroads or railroad equipment companies. The favorite for the post is a man who recently was elevated from his Washington job to one in another city.

SOME WEEKS AGO one of the employes of PM, who was in charge of setting up the Index of features each day, went to the office of Ralph Ingersoll, the editor, and suggested that the Index be eliminated. "It's sheer waste," he stated, "and nobody reads it." . . . "You're wrong," Ingersoll insisted. "The Index is quite important. Everybody looks at it." . . . The employe waited his chance. A few weeks later, he renewed his sugestion—but this time supplemented with proof. For two days he had set up the Index in French—and nobody complained or wrote a letter of comment. . . . The PM Index has been eliminated.

Fight Films At Trans-Lux

The Louis-Baer fight pictures have been added to the current Trans-Lux Theater bill. Starting with the 2 p. m. show Sunday, the prize fight movies appeared on the screen. The pictures are complete in every detail and fight fans again will have a chance to see Champion Joe Louis knocked out of the ring, and also decide for themselves whether the last knockout punch was before or after the gong had sounded. The fight films are a special attraction, an added feature of the regular show.

The news sections is tops, with intensely interesting war scenes, the most vivid betin ga new series from Indo-China, the crucial point in this section of the theater of war. Taking ranking honors with the pictures of England's new parachute army, and the vivid eye description of the Syrian battlefield, are those of the Zamzam sailing from New York in March, and the survivors' kin receiving the news of the passengers' safety.

From Singapore to London

From Singapore come shots of the first Pan American clipper arriving at this eastern British stronghold, while the House of Parliament and Westminster Abbey show the results of the latest and heaviest bombing. On the West Coast, from San Diego, we see the South American admirals much impressed, as a full division of U. S. Marines pass in review, while in Rio de Janeiro, both young men and women are training as pilots. Other newsreel features include. "I am an American Day" celebrations; New York's Mayor LaGuardia leaving the White House after his appointment as Civilian Defense Board head; the wreckage of the "That Man Hess" plane and many more items.

The sports world brings "Whirlaway" at Belmont Park; 5-year-old Bobby Dawson demonstrating his amazing golfing; motorcycle hill climbing on the Pacific Coast, and a trout fishing contest for kiddies at Yardville, N. J.

"A Village in India" is a splendid travelog. "The Jungle Archer" shows Tex Stone at his best, stalking the wild beasts of Mexico with a bow and arrows. "Abroad at Home" is an account of various spots in New York City resembling famous European buildings. The cartoon, "Western Daze," is the first in a new kind of laugh hit.

Visitation Girls, Mask, Bauble Join in One-Act Plays at G. U.

By Richard L. Coe

Time was when Georgetown students John Barrymore and Don Ameche got the collegiate gate for their fascination in what was "over the wall," which to the lads at Hilltop means girls of the Georgetown Visitation Junior College. Last night Actors Barrymore and Ameche would have blinked.

The girls took over the heretofore masculine stage of Gaston Hall, produced two one-act plays with the help of the university's Mask and Bauble Club and started a polite panic among their exam-conscious boy-friends. Gaston Hall had never seen anything like it and literally beamed with pleasure.

"The Gate," a comedy by Mathew O'Connor, and "Drums of Oude," a melodrama by Austin Strong, were the precedent-shattering vehicles and both allowed the boys and girls opportunity to get acquainted. They were originally prepared for an entertainment at Glendale Sanitarium, where they were presented Friday evening.

Unlike Catholic University, its sister-rival across the city, Georgetown's theatrical life is purely extra-curricular. There is no Speech and Drama Department at the Hilltop and, though its performances in the past have ranked high in contests of Roman Catholic college productions, last night's forte was novelty rather than achievement.

Serious Mood Difficulty

Opener on the double bill was O'Connor's comedy, a farce of newspaper life with a kernel of truth hidden its wisecracks. Marilee Chadeayne had the lead, playing a raspy-voiced secretary with the gyrations of a good-natured windmill. Despite her overplaying, she got her laughs from the friendly audience. Eleanor Schrup, Louise McCormick and Jean Vernon were the other girls from Visitation in this comedy, with John H. Pinto and Benjamin J. Zintak, jr., the lads from Georgetown. But what the mellowed arches of Gaston Hall will recall from this one were the crescendoing murmurs that rose from the clinches playwright O'Connor planned for Miss McCormick and surprised Zintak.

In "Drums of Oude," the author of "Seventh Heaven" wrote of mutiny in India of 1857. It's a romantic interlude with turbaned natives and kilted guards from the Scottish regiment. After the merriment of the earlier play and with the unfamiliar kilts to titivate a humor-conscious audience, the properly serious mood was all but impossible to capture, though veteran Howard S. Madigan and Paul I. Hilsdale and Angeliue de Golian ultimately managed to interest the audience in their plight. Miss de Golian's charming voice made hers the performance which should win the school authorities over to further collaboration between the two clubs. William F. Condon, Frank D. Hartnett, John B. Ross and Charles F. Geiger, jr., completed the cast.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 25.

A new company has been organized for launching a series of football newsreels during the fall. Norman Sper, the recognized authority on football, has just returned from a survey of 41 leading universities where he took thousands of feet of film, with the cooperation of the various coaches.

HOPPER

These newsreels, released each week, will give Sper's prediction of the games to be played the following Saturday, with a pictorial analysis in slow motion of the various plays of the favored team and the reasons for his choice.

St. Louis lies above the Mason-Dixon Line, but they certainly give you that old mint julep welcome. Twelve hours there is like three days in any other city. They don't kill you with kindness, but it isn't because they don't try. It's just because I happen to have a very strong constitution. And the welcome they gave for the Broadcasters' Association was something that town will remember for many a long day. No wonder Cleveland is jealous and wants the convention next year.

Don Wilson sends me word that he is challenging me for the title of "Maddest Hatter in Hollywood." Says his hat is in the ring and it's one that will turn me green with envy. Don's picture "Round Up" was premiered in Okemah, Okla., the home of the Shawnee Indians, and they not only inducted him into the tribe but sent him the head-dress with which he plans to lay me low! Tsk, tsk—there just ain't no more chivalry.

Jack Oakie's taken so much kidding on talking about his preserves that he's having a bunch in Sunday to make good his threat, and they'll watch the master at the preserving kettle. Fancy "Dictator Mussolini" preserving! . . Gertrude Stein, of "The Pigeons on the Grass, Alas" fame, has again put forth a puzzler. She states, "I've made the discovery that sentences are not emotional, but paragraphs are." Riddle me that—or just ignore it, as I shall.

Now that Dave Selznick has sworn that he'll make three pictures this year, he has scripts ready. Betting is going on as to which one will see the light of day first. Will it be "Jane Eyre"? My guess is that David, who is honestly interested in our South American relations, will do a South American story first and knock Hollywood for a loop. "Jane Eyre" will come third—and the second one is anybody's guess . . . They tell me at Warners that if the Hess sequence is written into "Underground" they May let Mona Maris accompany "Hess"—but there'll only be one parachute. If she lands right side up, it will be the neatest trick of the week. When that picture's released, expect raves for Karen Verne.

When Roscoe Ates came on the "Bad Men of Missouri" set the other day, the lights went down and the camera started rolling, so Roscoe dropped down on a mattress in a dark corner to wait. Scene was one in which Dennis Morgan and Wayne Morris jump off the back of a train, and the mattress had been put there to break their fall. When Roscoe realized what was going to happen, he tried to yell, but his stuttering held him up just long enough for the two of them to land right on top of him.

Congress May Launch Fight Investigation

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

Joe Louis was nearly forced to pay his way into Griffith Stadium on the night of his fight with Buddy Baer . . . Stadium attendants and Internal Revenue officials refused to admit Louis and his handlers when their car drove up to the automobile gate, and the champion's party cooled their heels for several minutes while word of their plight was carried to the front office . . . Lucky it was for Louis that Promoter Mike Jacobs transported his $13,000 ring equipment from New York for the fight . . . Had the regular Griffith Stadium ring been used, there would have been no wide apron to halt Louis' first-round flight through the ropes and the champion may have been counted out before he could get back into the ring . . . On the morning of the fight, Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, made a special call at the Boxing Commission office to learn the name of a capable plastic surgeon who might have to do a job on Baer . . . Strangely, Baer was unmarked, but Louis bled for the second time during his fight career.

POVICH

Within an hour after the stormy finish, the fighters, the referee and the Griffith Stadium front office were paid off by checks signed by Mike Jacobs . . . Jacobs used the promise of a return bout with Louis to hush Ancil Hoffman's mouthings about being forced to agree to Arthur Donovan as the referee . . . But before Hoffman was hushed he had fried both Jacobs and Donovan . . . Louis, incidentally, has knocked out everybody who ever knocked him down, which ought to provide some sort of a moral for his future foes . . . The officiating arrangements were an impossible hodge-podge from the start . . . The District of Columbia Boxing Commission gave Referee Donovan permission to score the fight on the New York system of scoring, but the two judges were using the District point system. . . . Donovan received $1,000 as referee and was the most overrated man in the ring.

Promoter Mike Jacobs was so delighted with Jimmy Lake's stylish job of announcing that he has invited Lake to handle future big bouts in New York. . . . Jacobs men declared after the fight that if Baer and Louis were rematched in Washington the ringside would be a sell-out at $20 tops, even if not a single ringside seat here sold in Washington. . . . Jacobs could dispose of 10,000 ringside seats to his New York customers. . . . The fact that Baer knocked Louis down adds at least $10,000 to the prospective gate of the Louis-Billy Conn fight, according to Jacobs' men. . . . Gene Tunney who once called Lou Nova "simply a horrible fighter" told Nova after Friday night's fight that he would lick Louis when they fought. . . . Louis, in his dressing room, was dog-tired an hour after the finish, but the badly-punished Baer was chatting gaily with his handlers and newspapermen 5 minutes after the fight.

Baer's only chance of winning was supposed to be contained in his right-hand punch, but it was, strangely, a left that sent Louis down in the first round. . . . Only once after his first-down knockdown did Louis appear to show any panic. . . . That was in the fourth round when Baer draped his 237 pounds all over Louis for nearly the entire round and the champion seemed to be very weary of the job of holding the big fellow up. . . . Most absurd of all the post-fight talk was that Louis carried Baer after the first round.

Louis wanted no more traffic with Baer than was absolutely necessary and was risking cracking up his hands in an attempt to get rid of him quickly . . . Louis' handlers stopped the flow of blood from his left eye at the end of the fifth round with Monsel's Solution, which was supposed to be barred by the District Boxing Commission rules . . . Baer's handlers will be wasting their breath when they protest to the District Boxing Commission today and claim Louis' title on a foul . . . One very definite law of the commission is that it may not reverse a referee's decision . . . And if Donovan says Louis threw the last punch "at the bell" not after the bell, well, it's as if a baseball umpire had called a third strike with great finality . . . Baer lost the fight when, in the fifth round, he missed by inches with a right hand to Louis' chin that would have felled a California redwood . . . A fair summation of it all would be that Louis and Baer fought the best fights of their careers . . . And Baer's courage is no longer under suspicion.

Jacobs pulled a new trick of pulling out duplicate sets of tickets for sale on the day of the fight. When the sale of $15 ringside seats slowed down, Jacobs moved ringside seats at $4, complying with the Federal tax law by having the $4 price printed on the tickets . . . There was, for instance, an $11 difference in the prices of seats in the thirteenth row where the $15 seats ended and the fourteenth row where the four-buck tickets began . . . Funniest sequence of the fight occurred on the radio when Announcer Sam Taub rebuked Ancil Hoffman for claiming a raw deal by the referee . . . After Hoffman was cut off the air, Taub attempted to explain that Hoffman was merely voicing his own opinion which should not be taken seriously . . . Whereupon Taub volunteered his own opinion, and seriously, that Louis hit Baer "at" and not after the bell.

Feller Fans 13 to Blank Browns, 6-0

Heath Is Hitting Star as Cleveland Wins 5th in Row; 20,000 See Game

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 25.—Bob Feller pitched the pace-setters of the American League to a shutout over the Browns today, getting 13 strikeouts, while Jeff Heath's dynamite-laden bat led the Indians' attack in the 6 to 0 victory.

That made it No. nine for Feller, his second straight shutout, five in a row for the Indians and a clean sweep of their three-game stadium series with St. Louis.

There were 20,000 fans on hand to see Feller's fireball in action, and they also saw Heath get a triple, a single and his ninth homer of the season in four trips, becoming the first batter ever to loft a ball into the upper decks of the stadium.

Allows Seven Hits

Feller gave up seven hits, but his fast one was working overtime and he allowed only two passes. He registered one strikeout in the first, three in the second, and got Johnny Allen, Strange and Grance in order in the third. He added Cullenbine to his string in the fourth.

Don Heffner's single was the Browns' first hit in the fifth, but in the sixth grace McQuinn and Cullenbine singled to fill the bases, whereupon Feller struck out the next three batters. Heffner was his victim again in the seventh and ninth.

Heath's triple in the second, behind Trosky's single, scored the first run, and Jeff came home after Gene Desautels' fly. The big homer came in the fourth, when Jeff was first up. In the fifth Gene Walker duplicated Weatherly's double, stole third and came home on Trosky's liner.

Boudreau Singles

The last run was Boudreau's. He singled, Weatherly sacrificed him to second, he took third on Grube's passed ball, and scored when Strange fumbled Heath's grounder.

Johnny Niggeling replaced Allen, the loser, after the sixth, and held the Tribe to its last two of nine hits.

Capitol Hill Plan Afoot, Rumor Says

Statement Expected Today After Boxing Commission Hears Hoffman's Protest

By Al Hailey

A Congressional investigation of the professional boxing business that may end in sweeping national laws which will shatter Mike Jacob's fight dynasty was brewing last night.

Although there was a reluctance to talk about the rumored investigation, the fact was known that a small group of Capitol Hill legislators had the move in mind as a result of the disqualification of Buddy Baer in his heavyweight fight with Joe Louis Friday night.

Aim of the inquiry would be to look into the so-called monopoly that Jacobs is said to have on the fight business and its respective champions, and to study charges of Ancil Hoffman that Referee Arthur Donovan was guilty of unfair practices Friday night when he disqualified Baer at the start of the seventh-round.

Not Ready to Talk

Asked about the reports that an investigation was in the offing, Representative Albert E. Carter, of California, a strong admirer of Baer, last night said he wasn't ready to make a statement.

"I don't know if there is anything definite yet," he said. "But I may have a statement for you tomorrow.

It was understood that the legislators interested in the case were awaiting the outcome of the District Boxing Commission meeting this morning at which Hoffman will protest Arthur Donovan's conduct of the Louis-Baer fight.

Hoffman also will demand Louis' title be conferred upon Baer on the grounds that Louis was guilty of a foul in knocking Baer down after the bell had ended the sixth round.

In the light of Donovan's statement that Louis did not strike Baer after the bell, the Boxing Commission has indicated it will abide by the referee's decision. If the action doesn't go to suit the Congressional bloc action in the House is a virtual certainty.

A House source, whose name was withheld, informed The Post that the legislators feel that Louis, as a "meal ticket" for Jacobs and Donovan, may have been favored by the latter over Baer because of this fact.

Grove Captures 296th Victory In Beating N.Y.

By the Associated Press

New York, May 25.—Lefty Grove had an easy time notching his 296th lifetime victory today as his Boston Red Sox teammates whaled three Yankee pitchers for a 10-to-3 decision.

All three Yankee runs off the veteran were unearned. Jimmy Foxx dropped Charlie Keller's foul for what would have been the third out in the fourth frame, after which Keller gratefully pounded a home run inside the grounds to score two ahead of him.

The Sox jumped on Marius Russo for their first eight runs, Ted Williams leading the Boston assault with four hits.

A's Score 5 in 8th To Defeat Nats, 7-3

Philadelphia Routs Dutch Leonard In Big Frame; Eighth Loss for Griffs

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, May 25.—The Nats are finding travel so broadening—to their losing streak. They collected their eighth straight defeat this afternoon—a little 7-to-3 number which they dropped to the Athletics.

Manager Bucky Harris attempted to disguise his futile fellows with another rearrangement of his line-up, but the A's recognized 'em as more or less the same club they had licked five times previously in six starts this season.

Harris back-tracked on Cecil Travis as a third baseman and moved him back to shortstop for today's affair.

On third base was Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth. Off the bench came Buddy Myer to play second. Infielder Buddy Lewis was in right field. But it looked like the same soft-touch ball club to the A's.

There was some slight delay about this eighth straight defeat of the Nats. In fact, as late as the last half of the seventh inning, it was a 2-2 tie. But Dutch Leonard remedied that situation completely. He pitched five runs and the ball game to the A's in their eighth inning.

Babich Lasts 7 Innings

Johnny Babich took his sore arm to the mound for the A's and lasted seven innings in what was shaping up as a tight duel with Leonard. The A's used a pinch hitter to tie the score in the seventh, and then young Tom Ferrick, late of the Bushwick semipros, took care of the Nats thereafter.

Until the sixth, the A's were holding a 1-0 lead, compounded in the second inning when, with two out, they stirred up a run against Leonard. They wrenched it out of Right Fielder Buddy Lewis' glove, in fact. Lewis was unable to hang onto Sam Chapman's drive into right field and the ball dropped for a two-bagger. Frank Hayes fetched Chapman home with a clean double to left.

Scoreless until the sixth against Babich, the Nats tied the score at 1-1, but muffed a big inning. After Lewis led off with a single to right Cramer was hit by a pitched ball. Travis got the tying run home with a single to center that moved Cramer to third, but with none as yet out the Nats subsided meekly. Vernon popped up and Bloodworth bounced into a double play.

Jake Early sent the Nats into a temporary 2-1 lead at the start of the seventh when his drive into the right field cleared the high wall by inches for his second homer of the series here. One was out and nobody was on base.

Collins Lays Down Bunt

In the A's seventh, Leonard pitched the tying run right back to them with the help of a strange sequence that added up to four outs for the A's in the inning. Here's what happened: Pinch Hitter Eddie

Memorial Day Race Assured Field of 28

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, May 25.—Tony Willman of Milwaukee, Sam Hanks, of Alhambra, Calif., and Overton Phillips, of Beverly Hills, Calif., qualified their cars today for the twenty-ninth annual 500-mile race, leaving only five places still to be filled in the starting field.

Twenty-eight speedsters now have gone 10 miles at the required 115 miles an hour or better to win positions among the 33 to take part in the race next Friday.

Willman, an Indianapolis motor speedway veteran, had the best speed today, driving 123.920 miles an hour to qualify on his second attempt. On the first run he stopped at the end of one lap because of motor trouble.

Hanks Encounters Trouble

Hanks, who has encountered a world of trouble in practice, finally got his speedster rolling and qualified at 118.211 miles an hour.

Phillips also needed two trials to qualify. He made it at 116.298.

His pace was so slow he was regarded in danger of losing the right to start. If more than 33 cars should qualify, the slowest automatically will be eliminated.

A check this afternoon showed seven or eight more cars might attempt to qualify. Additional trials will be held tomorrow from 3 until 7 p. m. (C. S. T.).

Rene Lebegue and Jean Trevoux, the two French entrants, made their first appearance on the track this afternoon in the French-built Talbots they brought to this country.

Goes Half the Test

Trevoux, who is here for the first time, ran about half of the driving test required of all newcomers at the speedway. He plans to complete his test tomorrow.

Lebegue said both he and Trevoux would be ready to qualify probably Tuesday. Lebegue drove in last year's race, finishing tenth, and thus is not required to take a driving test.

Two Texas Players Go to Detroit Farm

Borger, Tex., May 25 (AP).—Borger of the West Texas-New Mexico League has sold Outfielder Bill Scopetine and Third Baseman Stuart Williams to Detroit for undisclosed sums.

Scopetone left today for Winston-Salem of the Piedmont League, and Williams will go to the same club at the end of the season. Scopeton is hitting .394 and Williams .393.

Sacred Heart Scores

Sacred Heart A. C. had little difficulty with the Sligo nine yesterday, winning by a 13-4 margin at Georgetown Medical Field.

Billy Conn On Spot Against Knox Tonight

Pittsburgh Fighter Must Beat Foe Decisively to Get June 18 Date With Louis

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, May 25.—Billy Conn steps on the spot here tomorrow night when he battles Buddy Knox, of Dayton, Ohio., for 15 rounds or less.

The bout at Forbes Field, originally scheduled as a hometown dress rehearsal for Conn's heavyweight title date with Joe Louis in New York next month, assumed far graver importance in the wake of the hue and cry aroused by Champion Joe's weird victory over Buddy Baer.

Conn is a prohibitive favorite but even his most fanatical supporters admit he must beat Knox decisively to still the clamorings of Baer fans who claim Baer should be substituted for Billy in the June 18 shot at Louis.

Among the celebrities who will watch Conn box at Forbes Field tomorrow will be Louis himself, Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Conn-Louis fight, and a host of New York boxing writers.

Expect 20,000 Fans

Promoters of the Conn-Knox card were shooting for an attendance record before Baer surprised Louis. Now they are certain, given fair weather, the crowd will exceed the 20,000-odd which set the fight record at Forbes Field.

Both Conn and Knox have promised to demolish each other.

Baer's performance against Louis has acted as a tocsin for Knox and he predicted he would score another major fistic upset by beating Billy.

"Conn will lick Louis if he gets by me," Knox said, creating the impression that Billy won't find the champion any tougher.

"If they think I can't punch, let 'em watch me against Knox," Billy said as he wound up training and went into seclusion to await the bell.

Conn Must Show More

Two other ten-round heavyweight matches support the Conn-Knox headliner. These pit Lee Savold, Des Moines, Iowa, against Harry Bobo, Pittsburgh Negro knockout specialist, and Pat Comiskey, Jersey City Irishman, against James J. Johnson, New York Negro, who is Conn's sparring mate.

Fight experts see the greatest element of chance in the Savold-Bobo fight, but Jacobs had demanded that Conn make "a good showing" against Knox to clinch his title match with Louis.

The fight tops a red letter day for boxing in Pittsburgh. Earlier in the day Jacobs will preside as Sammy Angott, National Boxing Association lightweight champion from Washington, Pa., signs for a 15-round title match against Lew Jenkins, recognized as lightweight boss in New York and States not governed by the N. B. A.

Bob Elliott's Condition Reported Much Improved

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 25.—The condition of Outfielder Bob Elliott of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who suffered a brain concussion when hit by a pitched ball yesterday, was reported much improved today.

Dr. Robert F. Hyland said, however, he would have to remain at St. John's Hospital another day or two.

Elliott was struck in the head by one of Rookie Sam Nahem's fast pitches as he was batting in the eighth inning of the Cardinal-Pirates game. He was carried off the field on a stretcher.

Eddie Arcaro's Father Wounded By Revolver Shot

By the Associated Press

Covington, May 25.—Pat Arcaro, 48, father of Eddie Arcaro, who rode Whirlaway to victory in this year's Kentucky Derby, is in Booth Hospital seriously wounded by a revolver bullet which his second wife, Philamena, 34, is charged with firing during an argument early today.

Arcaro, owner of the Paddock Cafe here, was struck in the chest with the bullet which deflected from his left hand and shoulder.

Patrolmen John Kinsella and Harry Burgess, jr., who filed charges of shooting and wounding with intent to kill against Mrs. Arcaro, said the woman told them that her husband struck her during an argument at the cafe and was about to strike her again when she shot him.

Paul Runyan Takes Goodall

Diminutive Golfer Earns $1,000 First Money at N. Y.

By the Associated Press

New York, May 25.—Paul Runyan, who is by no means rugged but very much an individualist, came from behind with a sub-par 69 on the seventh and final round to win the $5,000 Goodall Round-Robin golf tournament today. It was his first major United States victory since the P. G. A. championship of 1938 and his first win of any kind since the Argentine Open in the fall of the same year.

"Little Poison," who tossed in his two best rounds when it would do him the most good, finished the 126 holes of the fourth annual Goodall Circus 23 shots over par. In spite of that poor medal showing, he had a total of 26 plus points, representing the net number of holes he won in his 14 matches.

The two-time former pro champion made the most of the fine 69 with which he closed out his triumph. Three points back of big Victor Ghezzi starting that last match, and up against Ghezzi and

PAUL RUNYAN

Horton Smith, he threw a 4-up victory into Ghezzi and a 5-up decision into Smith to finish 10 points ahead or Ghezzi and Gene Sarazen, who tied for second and drew down $650 each.

But while that 69 was a great round over the tough Fresh Meadow Country Club course, and rated him a great reception from the final day's gallery of 3,500, Runyan did have to tip his hat to lady luck. For he scored heavily with his two good rounds and didn't lose much ground on his worst ones.

His first 69, for instance, gave him 14 points against Willie Goggin and Toney Penna, who pinch-hit respectively for Sam Snead and Craig Wood. The 76 he posted in the second round and the 75 he got in the fifth still were good enough to get him two points each, and even on the seven-over-par 77 he got this morning he broke even against United States Open Champion Lawson Little and Jug McSpaden.

The turning point for Runyan came on the tenth hole this afternoon. Even with Ghezzi and 1 up on Smith at that point for the match, he wielded his paddle-putter to knock in a 15-footer for a birdie 3 that beat both men. He picked up another on Ghezzi at the eleventh, where Vic missed the green badly; eased in a 6-foot putt to go 3 up on

Crespi, Rookie Star, Hurt as Cardinals Take Double-Header

Birds Down Pirates Twice, 6-4 and 4-3

Sensational Second Baseman Suffers A Fractured Finger Fielding a Grounder

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 25.—The Cardinals lost another rookie star to the injury list today but went on to take a doubleheader from Pittsburgh, 6 to 4 and 4 to 3, and sweep a four-game series with the Pirates.

Frank Crespi, sparky young second baseman whose sensational play has highlighted the Cards' present home stand, suffered a fractured finger attempting to stop a hot grounder off the bat of Lee Handley in the first game and probably will be out at least two weeks.

Mesner Scores Winner

But Steve Mesner, who replaced him in the batting order, stepped right up and slammed out a double with the bases loaded in the eighth inning to drive in the winning run and two to spare. In the field Jimmy Brown moved over to second and Mesner took third.

The Bucs rallied in the ninth but scored only one run after filling the bases with none out.

The Cards were outhit in both games, 15 to 10, in the first, and 12 to 11 in the nightcap, but placed their punches where they hurt most.

The twin victory extended their winning streak to six straight and increased their margin over Brooklyn to 2½ games.

Gumpert Is Victor

Although Manager Billy Southworth rushed in three relief hurlers to save the first game, Harry Gumbert, who was hammered for 15 hits, was credited with his third straight win since coming to the Cardinals from the Giants. Aldon Wilkie, who held the Birds to six hits for eight rounds, was the loser.

The Pirates again threw a scare into the Cards in the ninth inning of the second game, but Max Krist with the tying run on second base stifled the uprising in time to give the young right-hander his third straight win.

Chisox Beat Tigers, 7 to 3; Square Series

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 25.—Young Pitcher Hal Newhouser weakened in the seventh inning today and started the Chicago White Sox on a spree that gave them seven runs in that inning and a 7 to 3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

A cobination of three hits, three walks and an error produced the Chicago rally, and gave the Sox an even break in the four-game series.

Newhouser yielded only four hits during the first six innings, but the Sox, runless for 26 consecutive innings, nicked him for two at the start of the seventh as they started a base parade that brought Al Benton and Tommy Bridges to the mound before the inning ended.

Home runs by Rudy York in the second inning and Frankie Croucher in the ninth gave the Tigers two of their runs. Thornton Lee, went the route for Chicago and allowed eight hits.

Cubs' 9th Inning Run Trips Cincinnati, 3-2

Charley Root Takes Nod Over Derringer in Tight Engagement

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 25.—Charley Root, the Chicago Cubs' 42-year-old right-hander, won a 3-to-2 ninth-inning decision over Paul Derringer and the Cincinnati Reds before 18,663 fans today.

Billy Nicholson doubled to open the frame and, after a sacrifice, Catcher Charley George singled him home. The blow broke a 2-2 deadlock existing since the third inning.

Ernie Lombardi staked Derringer to a 2-0 lead in the second with his season's fourth homer after Third Baseman Chuck Aleno had smashed a single off Root's glove. Rookie Lou Novikoff homered to halve the Reds' advantage to 2-1 in the home second and in the third Stan Hack tripled and knotted the count on Phil Cavaretta's fly.

The victory, Root's second of the year and 195th of his National League career, gave the Chicagoans an even split on the four-game series and ended their home stand with seven victories against five defeats.

Scalzo 'Victory' Over Zwick Ruled Draw

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, May 25.—The Wisconsin State athletic commission has ruled the N. B. A. featherweight championship fight here last Monday between Petey Scalzo, titleholder, and Phil Zwick, of Kaukauna, Wis., be called a draw.

Commission Secretary Fred Saddy said the ruling was the result of a hearing today on charges that Referee Barney Ross had scored the fight 75 points for each contestant and later changed his score card, giving Scalzo 76 points and Zwick 74.

A statehent issued by the commission said:

"The commission has a rule which prohibits alterations on a score card at any time, and the decision of the referee was not consistent with the 75-75 markings on his score card. Therefore, the decision of the referee must be made consistent with his card and the bout be called a draw."

Ross was not present at the hearing, but he has been notified of the change, Saddy said.

Al Fain, Zwick's manager, announced he would meet with Joe Triner, National Boxing Association chairman, in Chicago tomorrow and attempt to have Zwick named the No. 1 challenger for Scalzo's crown.

Western Nine Meets Central

Western High's baseball forces are in a position to bring the regular interhigh baseball schedule to a close today, leaving only the championship series starting Thursday, when they run up against Central at the Georgetown diamond at 3:30.

A Raider victory earns a place for Western in the title series with Eastern, but a Central victory will necessitate at least one other game to decide the second team in the playoff.

Western will pick its starting pitcher today from among Charley Hines, Billy Gray and Clarence Kuldell, while Central is almost certain of starting Aaron Weisenberg.

Rally in 6th Beats Phils, 8-4, For Dodgers

By the Associated Press

New York, May 25.—Five big runs in the sixth inning gave the Brooklyn Dodgers an 8-to-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies today.

Pete Reiser, Dodger center fielder, accounted for four runs with a homer with the bases full.

Whitlow Wyatt started the game for the winners and was relieved by Bill Swift in the fourth inning when the Phillies scored two runs to take a 2-to-1 lead.

The Dodgers went ahead with two in the fourth to take the lead and Philadelphia surged back with two more in the sixth before Brooklyn had its sixth-inning splurge. Swift was the winning pitcher.

Lee Grissom started for the Phillies and was charged with the loss.

he penalized Baer instead of Louis. Donovan stated:

"The heavyweight championship is the biggest prize in pugilism. It should not be allowed to be won in that fashion, anyway, particularly when a man is on his way out—which Baer was, as was apparent to everyone."

A large number of Senators and Representatives were in the ringside Friday night and heard the conflicting arguments over Donovan's disqualification of Baer and his actions in the first round after Baer had knocked Louis through the ropes.

Donovan seemed to be under the impression the round was over after Louis crawled back into the ring and refused to let the two fight until the timekeeper shouted to him the round had quite a few seconds to go.

Representative Fred J. Hartley, of New Jersey, "father" of the District boxing bill, and Senator Warren J. Barbour, also of New Jersey, were unavailable for statements last night.

It was recalled that Barbour, in hearings on the repeal of the bill prohibiting interstate transportation of fight films, said at that time Congress might look into charges monopolistic practices existed in the prize fight industry.

The Boxing Commission hearing at which Hoffman will appear this morning at 11 a. m. will be staged in the boxing body's offices in the old police headquarters building, 462 Indiana Avenue Southwest.

Braves Use 22 Players, Lose To Giants, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 25.—The New York Giants tied together three runs in the third inning today enough to win the ball game although the Boston Braves used 22 players in a frantic effort to avoid the ultimate 6-2 defeat before a home crowd of more than 9,000.

The three tallies came off the delivery of starting pitcher Joe Sullivan, first of a quintet of Brave hurlers who gave up 14 hits over the nine inning route.

Johnny Rucker, who hit in the first four of his five visits to the plate, opened the fatal inning with a single. Burgess Whitehead sacrificed him along to second and Harry Danning brought him home with a single. Babe Young lofted one of Sullivan's pitches into the right field bleachers, scoring behind Danning.

Cliff Melton started for the Giants but was lifted in the eighth with a 5-2 lead after Eddie Miller opened with a double and Max West drew a base on balls. Bill Lohrman, longtime nemesis of the Braves, throttled the incipient rally and finished up effectively.

Standard Linen Routs Garvin's

Standard Linen trounced Garvin's Grill, of the Capital City League, yesterday at Washington Softball Stadium, 12-1, in the feature game of a card of three, as Johnny Hoye tossed two hit ball. The Linemen gathered ten safeties, led by Brasse and Greene, with two each.

Boy's Club Central Branch dropped a pair of decisions in the other two games, bowing, 7-1, to Evening Star as Miller and Fuchs hurled effectively, and 5-4, to Giant Food Stores despite "Curly" White's three hit effort. Kushner hurled for the victors.

CONSIDINE

The secret about Whirlaway's long tail is no longer a secret. As you perhaps know, the 3-year-old champion has the longest tail of any horse now in training. It almost sweeps the ground, as he walks to the post, and when he's in full flight it undulates far out behind him in almost billowing waves.

We thought Trainer Ben Jones permitted it to grow this long because Ben is a good showman and knows that it adds to the beauty of the animal. But an old friend of Jones told us the other day that letting Whirlaway's tail grow was just another of Ben's shrewd ideas.

"Ben picked up an old half-mile track stunt when he let it grow," our trainer informed us. "On the half-mile tracks the turns are often pretty sharp, so the old boys used to go in for long-tailed horses. They knew that another horse would never run into the flying tail of a horse in front of it. Nor would they even get very close. Instead, the horse trailing a long-tailed horse would bear out and lose the few strides that often meant the difference between winning and losing the race.

As it is now turning out, Whirlaway could still win races if he were as bob-tailed as a manx cat. But Ben isn't missing a single bet—or precaution.

Baseball?

If Joe Cronin ever writes his autobiography, he can write with authority about the unhappy metamorphosis of Boston from the fairest baseball town in the country to one of the most rabidly unjust. When Joe went to the Hub in 1935 the city seemed to enjoy baseball for baseball's sake. Customers at Fenway Park were known for their sportsmanlike reception of Red Sox and rival alike. A good play by an invader was applauded as enthusiastically as a good play by a Bostonian. Boston, true to its erudite background, insisted that the play was the thing.

Cronin symbolized the new order. He cost a mint, as did the fading stars who preceded him to Boston or came shortly after he arrived. Tom Yawkey's tremendous investments brought better baseball to Beantown; some reward for its long years of loyalty to more or less ridiculous teams. But, by and large, Boston suddenly was not satisfied with anything less than perfection. Cronin, cheered in Boston while playing with Washington, began to be blistered by boos in Boston. So were some of the others, but not as severely as Joe.

This season, though he is having his best year at the bat in several years, he is again the object of surprisingly vicious abuse from a loud minority in the stands.

Boxing?

Billy Conn, if we are to believe Mike Jacobs, carries one heulva mental load into his fight tomorrow night against Buddy Knox in Pittsburgh. Mike said in Washington after the stirring Louis-Baer fight that if Conn did not make gelatine out of Knox, Buddy would be given the June shot against Louis at the Polo Grounds.

We rather doubt if Mike will do anything as drastic as that, knowing, as he does, that the Conn-Louis fight will do very nice, whether Billy knocks Knox cock-eyed or just manages to out-slap him. Mike knows also that he can take the Louis-Baer rematch any place in the country and clean up with it. But Mike nonetheless is getting tough with Conn. The promoter and Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, are not hitting it off too well these days. Ray is heavily obligated to Mike, and Mike is sore at Conn's tainted victory over Barlund and Ray's making plans for the Knox fight without consulting Mike very much.

You can bet that the promoter will do a good job of scaring the light-hitting Conn into a furious endeavor against Knox. A bad Conn showing would take $100,000 off the Conn-Louis gate.

Golf?

Willie Goggin, the light-hearted California Irishman who substituted for Sam Snead in the Goodall tournament, was pretty badly outclassed by the field. But his setbacks never got him down, not even when the locker-room boy at Fresh Meadow forgot to shine his shoes—after attending to the shoes of all the other competitors. "I can't blame him," Goggin laughed. Playing with short-tempered Lawson Little in an early round, Goggin (who was taking a licking from Little) watched a movie camera fan with a very noisy camera train the lens on Little and make so much noise that Little topped his shot very badly. Willie walked over to the pest with the photographic cement mixer and quietly handed him a cigar.

Fighting Words . . .

Mike Jacobs to Form Alliance With Joe Turner, Menendez

By Al Hailey

Mike Jacobs is going to form an alliance with Promoter Joe Turner and Gabe Menendez, the combine which saw their financial castles tumbling when the New York "czar" moved in . . . a meeting has been planned for tomorrow morning . . . whether Ray Alvis, Mike's hustling front man, will get the air is not known . . . but Jacobs is said to be peeved at Alvis' handling of affairs toward the end of the build-up . . . Alvis says everything is peaches and cream between himself and Jacobs, however.

The District Boxing Commission's meeting this morning to hear Ancil Hoffman charge Referee Arthur Donovan with everything but stealing the shoes on Buddy Baer's feet is strictly a publicity gesture . . . the Commission has no idea of cracking down on Donovan with anything more severe than a gentle slap on the wrist with a written reprimand for failing to charge Joe Louis with a foul punch after the bell rang ending the sixth round.

No one appreciates this better than Hoffman himself, who secretly is thankful for the spectacular ending which insures Buddy of some sort of a future in the fight business . . . Hoffman, after being promised a return shot with Louis for Baer, has begged the commission to give him a hearing just for the publicity purposes if nothing else . . . and that body which has agreed to anything Mike Jacobs suggested obligingly agreed to play along with Ancil.

Official films of the Louis-Baer fight probably will do little toward solving the situation . . . Tom Morgan, junior member of the Boxing Commission, said that at the fight he heard the bell ending the round before Louis struck Baer with that controversial punch but he couldn't hear it when he saw the films yesterday at the Hiser Theater in Bethesda . . . Manager Henry Hiser said that "while it would be easy to fake out the sound of the bell you could hear it before Louis knocks Baer down the third time."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown and Commission Chairman Claude W. Owen were withholding comment on today's hearing, but Morgan, jr., was outspoken last night.

Incensed at reports Jacobs "dictated" to the Commission, Morgan said Jacobs hadn't demanded a thing of the local boxing body . . . Morgan said regulation 8-ounce gloves were used despite conflicting reports that the New York promoter rang in his own 5-ounce mittens. "Jacobs gave us four referees to choose from and was perfectly willing to use a local man, but I insisted on Donovan," Morgan said. "If you're going to have turkey you might as well have all the trimmings."

Donovan was guilty of stupidity of the worst sort, but because of his past reputation the "house referee" implications hurled at him were lightened. Donovan could be barred by the District of Columbia, and his suspension would become effective in some 40 N. B. A. territories . . . but the local fistic fathers don't want to do anything that would antagonize a money-making setup such as Jacobs' fights . . . The commission's 10 per cent take on the $105,183 gate only makes the members hungry for more . . . they will seek a corporation counsel ruling permitting them to take 10 per cent of training camp proceeds hereafter . . . Washington won't see another Buddy Baer-Joe Louis fight, however . . . Jacobs is going to take that to Chicago or New York, where he believes that it will draw $500,000 . . . probably in October . . . Buddy will be a fond memory to the District of Columbia, which he gave the thrill of its life by knocking Champion Joe out of the ring. Growing philosophic over his "office-boy-for-Jacobs" tab, Alvis says he doesn't care

Alton Willett Upsets Skinker for Schoolboy Title

Bethesdan's Birdie On 18 Is Decisive

Hair Wins Washington Club Qualifying Medal; Schulman Woodmont Star

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Two down with four holes to play and apparently doomed to a runner-up role in the Metropolitan Schoolboy Golf Championship, Bethesda's Alton Willett came through with one of the season's better rallies yesterday to win the title on Congressional's eighteenth green over Earle Skinker, 1 up.

The 16-year-old Kenwood caddy, playing in the tournament for the first time in his sophomore year at the suburban school, calmly stepped up to a 12-foot putt on the last green and knocked it in for a birdie three. Skinker then missed one half that distance to lose a chance for a second straight schoolboy crown.

Gets Post Trophy

Willett received The Washington Post Trophy for a year, to be kept at his school, and a replica for permanent possession. Skinker received a prize for runner-up while another awaits the winner of the three-way medal play-off between the Willett brothers, Carroll and Alton, and Skinker. They tied with 75s Friday at Kenwood.

The new champion won his way to the finals with a round of 74 which sent Roosevelt's Charles Griffin to a 5 and 4 defeat in the morning semifinals. He avenged his older brother's defeat at the hands of Griffin Saturday at Manor. Skinker advanced over Art Myers, of Roosevelt, by winning the sixteenth and seventeenth holes with a bogey and par for a 2 and 1 triumph.

Champion Off Form

Young Willett, fourth of a family of five golfing brothers, was well off his game on the front nine and, including a seven on the fifth hole where he was in all kinds of trouble, was out in 44 and one down. Skinker was out in 41.

Skinker, the 19-year-old Devitt student who won the medal and tournament last year and was runner-up to Ralph Bogart in 1939, was apparently on his way to another victory on the back nine. He won the twelfth hole with a par three as Willett was trapped, and was about to go three up on the fourteenth, when Willett played a beautiful approach shot over trouble within 4 feet of the cup and dropped the putt to halve the hole.

That shot provided the incentive for his victory. Alton won the fifteenth hole when Skinker's second shot overcarried the green by 30 yards and he rolled in a 20-footer from the fringe of the green to halve the sixteenth. Earle was trapped on the seventeenth and took a six as Willett squared the match with a regulation par four.

Even at Eighteenth Hole

The boys were even coming to the eighteenth, a 277-yard par four, and Skinker drove just short of the green, some 30 yards in front of Willett. The latter pitched 12-feet short of the cup and Skinker's chip ran 6 feet past. Without a moment's hesitation the lanky youngster dropped the putt for a birdie and Skinker pulled his 6-footer to the left of the hole for one of the biggest upsets in the eight-year history of the championship.

Both boys were 80 for the final round, and each had one bad hole. It was Willett's fine recovery shots which provided the margin of victory. They set something of a record for time, playing 36 holes by 1:40 o'clock.

Alton is the first of the golfing Willetts to win a schoolboy title. Gilbert, the oldest of the boys who live within a long putt of the Kenwood golf course, was assistant pro at Kenwood but he is now in the automobile business. Raymond is assistant to Gene Larkin at Woodmont while Carroll and Alton are Bethesda students and have a younger brother in grade school.

Frank Emmet, representative of an oil company and an official of the Devitt School, presented the prizes after running the tournament for the eighth consecutive year. Emmet has been a consistent and persevering backer of scholastic golf and due to his efforts the boys used three country clubs over a busy weekend without a single complaint.

Jack Schulman, jr., and Sam Smith deadlocked for low scoring honors among the Class B players with 84—21—63 and 90—27—63, respectively.

Schulman, who has been playing golf only a few months, had watched his scores drop with amazing rapidity under Pro Gene Larkin's teaching and yesterday he broke 85 for the first time after cracking 100 for the first time only a few weeks ago and then dropping under the 90 mark only last week.

Woodmont members contributed $114 to the Maple Leaf Fund, the first of two golf tournaments for the benefit of British War Relief. Medal winners in the under 50-year-of-age class were Jacobs, 82—19—63; Smith, 90—27—63, and Sam Samuels, 82—18—64.

Winners in the senior class were Max Offenberg, 95—25—70 Harry Rubin, —95—23—7, and Dave Stern, 91—17—74. The only club to contribue more than Woodmont was Washington, which last week gave $120 from as many entries.

John R. Miller was low in the over 50-years class with 75, 6—69, with O. T. Wright second, 92, 14—78, and R. A. Mitchell, 106, 26—80.

Mrs. M. S. Shahan and Mrs. Lew Libby played two full rounds before the former posted a 1 up victory in the semifinals of the Marmion Troph women's match play handicap championship. Mrs. W. Rippy, Peacock Win In State 4-Ball Play

To Meet Overton and Barnes in Final Round; Smith Wins at Congressional; Tie at Columbia

The stage was set for a renewal of the 1940 Maryland State 4-ball championship finals next Sunday as defending champions Roger Peacock and Claude Rippy and last year's runners-up, Spencer Overton and Erford Barnes, won semifinal matches yesterday at Congressional.

Both teams had unexpected trouble in reaching the title round and they required best ball scores of five and three under par to conquor stubborn opposition.

Peacock and Rippy, the District's only survivors since the second round, representing Indian Spring, defeated John MacKenzie, president of the Maryland State Golf Association, and Johnny Farrell, Loyola University golf captain, 2 and 1. The losers are from Hillendale.

Overton, a former Maryland State amateur champion, and Barnes, of Rolling Road, were taken to the last hole before posting a 2-up margin over Billy Eager, also a former State champion, and Edgar Lucas, of Baltimore Country Club.

Peacock reported a match play 70, Rippy a par 72, and the star amateurs put together a best ball 67. Overton and Barnes were 3 under with a 69, Overton starring with a 69.

The championship will be played next Sunday over the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club, near Timonium, Md.

CONGRESSIONAL

O. T. Smith won Congressional's Spring Handicap Match play championship yesterday over T. B. Conlyn, 1 up, in 27 holes. Smith received five strokes allowance and they finished all square at the end of 18 holes. The winner received two strokes on the extra nine, where he finally won, 1 up.

H. A. Cristadoro won the second flight over C. H. McClain, 2 and 1; J. A. Agur won the third over F. E. Johnson, 5 and 3, and J. P. Strong won the fourth over W. W. Bayfield, 1 up.

COLUMBIA

The Cummings Cup qualifying round was marked by a tie at Columbia Country Club as the leading amateurs of the club paired up in two-man teams for the right to challenge George Miller and Martin McCarthy for the big cup.

Earle Skinker, who played 36 holes in the Schoolboy championship early in the day, played 18 more at Columbia and he and Maury Nee posted a best ball 71, 1 over par. Page Cornwell and Craig McKee tied this figure and Dr. Paul M. Stewart, golf committee chairman, will set a date for the play-off. Ray Swearingen and Don Buckingham missed the tie by a stroke with a 72.

KENWOOD

Kern McLaughlin used handicap strokes to advantage throughout the tournament and yesterday won the Chamberlin trophy at Kenwood with a 2 and 1 victory over R. G. Peebles in the finals of the championship flight.

R. H. Fuchs posted low net score in the sweepstakes with 79, 13—66, while Jack Keele's 71 was the best gross score.

First Flight

Kern McLaughlin defeated R. G. Peebles, 2 and 1.

Second Flight

H. T. Morse defeated Harry Langley, 3 and 2.

Third Flight

Special Dispatch to The Post

Andrews gave the winners new life in the ninth when he drove home the run that tied the count at 8-8, and in the tenth his repetition of the feat decided matters. Mattos was outhit, 12-9, by Quantico but made all its hits count. Chisholm and Giller combined on the mound for the winners.

Don Budge's Pro Match Postponed

By International News Service

Chicago, May 25.—Defending Champion Donald Budge turned up with a two-week-old but previously undisclosed injury today at the fifteenth National Professional Tennis Toutnament, and as a result his first match was postponed until Tuesday.

Budge stumbled and fell down a flight of stairs at a New York apartment hotel May 12, suffering a broken nose and a torn ear, he revealed. Six stitches were taken in his left ear and his nose was reshaped at a New York hospital.

However, the red-haired tennis champion was able to appear in a doubles exhibition match before the tournament crowd at the Chicago Town and Tennis Club this afternoon. He is 10 pounds under his usual playing weight.

His first round match was to have been today against John Faunce, of Hollywood. They will meet Tuesday instead.

Open Tests Set Today Over Nation

1,000 Golfers Will Shoot to Win 128 Places in National Play

By the Associated Press

New York, May 25.—The one out of ten golfers who have it—it, in this case, being the necessary skill and luck to qualify for the National Open championship—will get their chance to show it tomorrow.

In 27 locations from Worcester, Mass., to Los Angeles and Jacksonville, Fla., to Portland, Oreg., about a thousand crack golfers will shoot 36-hole rounds trying to win 128 places that still are available in the Open tournament at Fort Worth, Tex., June 5, 6 and 7.

That gives each one a little better than a one-in-ten chance of qualifying, since the entry list this year is the smallest since 1933. Still the competition in most of the districts will be terrific. The original entry list was 1,052. Of these 42 were granted exemption from the sectional qualifying rounds because they finished in the low 30 and ties last year, or because they had won the Open title in previous years or, in one case, because he is the pro at Fort Worth's Colonial Club, where the big tournament will be played.

Most Top Pros on List

Most of the top-flight playing pros are included in this list, but there are a few of the best who had off seasons in 1940 and a good many who are getting along in years and prefer to stay at home most of the time, only coming out on such special occasions as this. They'll have to play through to get back to the top bracket. Practically all the first-flight amateurs have to win their places in the open field through the sectional tests.

The Chicago and New York districts, two of the strongest, although Dallas has the year's biggest group of would-be qualifiers, are top-heavy with prominent players who have to tackle the preliminary grind. The Chicago field includes such well-known names as Harry Cooper, Denny Shute, Johnny Bulla, Dutch Harrison, Ky Laffoon, Butch Krueger, Bill Mehlhorn, Abe Espinosa and Jock Hutchison, whose son, Jock, jr., is on the exempt list.

Includes "Name" Golfers

Among the 65 players shooting for 12 qualifying places in the New York district will be Jimmy Thomson, Toney Penna, Paul Runyan, Jimmy Demaret, Clayton Heafner, Willie Klein and five of the Turnesa boys, Joe, Jim, Mike, Phil and Doug.

Skimming over the other districts, those noted include Sam Byrd and Joe Kirkwood, sr., and jr., at Philadelphia, veteran Bobby Cruickshank and Al Houghton at Washington, Al Espinosa at Cleveland, Mortie Dutra, Al Watrous, Marvin Stahl and Chick Harbert at Detroit; Walter Blevins, Leonard Dodson and Leland Gibson at Kansas City; Don Schumacher at Dallas, Zell Eaton at Tulsa and George von Elm at Los Angeles.

Dick Chapman, the 1940 National Amateur champion, will try to win one of six places available for 42 players at Birmingham, Ala.

28 Play at Columbia For 4 Open Berths

Al Houghton, from the District; Bobby Cruickshank, Virginia, and Rut Coffey, Maryland, each are a red-hot favorite to land one of the four Middle Atlantic places to the National Open in today's 36-hole tests at Columbia Country Club.

Cruickshank, who has few equals in alltime National Open records, played the course again yesterday but did not complete his practice round. Baltimore's Charlie Betscher and Jesse Dowling, jr., also tested the course but did not report a score.

Gene Larkin, who qualified for the Open and P. G. A. last year, announced last night he would be unable to compete in the trials, thus reducing the field to 27 for the four places.

Fred McLeod, host professional, is exempt as a former champion, while Baltimore's Andy Gibson is an automatic qualifier, having finished in the first 30 last year.

Lewis Worsham, jr., Burning Tree pro, will lead the players off the first tee at 9 a. m. and 1 o'clock for the second round.

Four Big Races Scheduled at Charles Town This Week

Route Test Today Lures Field of Six

Sprinters Will Vie On Holiday Card Friday; Records To Be Threatened

Patrons of the popular and picturesque Charles Town track are in this week for one of the most interesting and colorful periods of the current 48-day spring-summer meeting.

With Memorial Day falling on next Friday, May 30, and with the following day to be a holiday for many workers in Baltimore, Washington and in other cities and towns within the area from which the Charles Town course draws, it is believed that new attendance and betting records will be set before a new week dawns.

Racing Secretary Fred Burton has designed programs for the week that are unusually attractive for a track of less than a mile in circumference, and he believes, he said yesterday, that all of his feature races will "stand up." He has programmed four big event this week instead of the customary three, listing one for Memorial Day as well as one each for today, Wednesday and next Saturday.

Four Big Races

The line-up of features for the week reads as follows:

Today: Baltimore Sun Purse; a mile and an eighth; for 3-year-olds and upward.

Wednesday, May 28—Evening Sun Handicap; mile and one-sixteenth; $1,000; 3-year-olds and upward. Entries close today (Monday, May 26); weights Wednesday, May 28.

Friday, May 30—Memorial Day Purse; about 7 furlongs; $1,000; for 3-year-olds and upward.

Saturday, May 31—Capital Handicap; mile and a sixteenth; $1,000; for 3-year-olds and upward.

These features are so designed as to offer racing and earning opportunities to the best 3-year-olds and upward on the grounds and in the vicinity. Judging from the work tabs, and from the interest owners and trainers have been exhibiting, the features for the week will provide visitors with high-caliber racing.

Charles Town and the beautiful vicinity are crowded now with visitors, many of whom are vacationing during this and next week. The hotels and lodging houses report capacity reservations for the holiday weekend, and are anticipating, for the next fortnight, the biggest business in the history of the locality as a pleasure center. The vast majority of the visitors, of course, are here specifically for the races. But in the mornings there is much for them to see in the neighborhood—the vast and magnificent apple orchards, nearby Antietam Battlefield, historic Harpers Ferry, the local cave in which George Washington conducted Masonic meetings, and the scene of the hanging of John Brown.

Historic Section

Within an easy driving range of Charles Town are places of outstanding historic importance, and drives of unequalled beauty. Many patrons of the racetrack have discovered these long since, and have come to make yearly visits to them during the racing season. Thus they kill two birds with one stone.

Judging from the attendance and betting at the track during the first two weeks of the meeting, and from the unusually high calibre of the sport presented, there are many sound reasons to believe that this holiday week will prove the most notable in the track's history to date.

Gutter Near La Vale to Be Ready June 15

By the Associated Press

Cumberland, May 25.—Construction of gutters on the national highway addition above the old distillery in LaVale will be completed about June 15, John H. Carscaden, county engineer, announced today.

Fifteen hundred feet of the half-mile gutter remain to be completed, he said, adding that approximately 200 men are working on WPA projects in Allegany County.

The concrete gutter is being built in connection with the recent paving of five streets in that section by WPA workers. Upon completion of the project, Carscaden said, the 17 men employed there will be transferred to the Iresap Road, where a half mile of road building is to be completed.

Staggered shifts are being used on the Ziegler Road in the eastern end of the county near the Washington County line, and this project will be completed about July 1.

The Brice Hollow Road, 3½ miles in length, running from Spring Gap to Twigtown, will be completed about July 30.

The Hinkle Road, from which men were transferred to the airport in Wiley Ford, W. Va., will be reopened by the WPA when the Brice Hollow project is completed. The Wilson Road, from Oldtown to Carpenter's Toll Bridge, will be completed about June 1. Breakneck Road will be reopened as soon as other jobs are completed and men are available, Carscaden declared.

A half mile of the Dans Rock Road has been oiled and the curving for the U-shaped driveway leading to the new Beall High School on Eckhart Flat, is partly finished. The driveway of macadam will run from 30 to 40 feet in width.

Co-op of Shops In Va. Gets 1st Defense Order

By the Associated Press

Richmond, May 25.—An experiment in "farming out" small defense sub-contracts to a cooperative organization is underway in the Shenandoah Valley as a result of the work of a group of leaders who refused to be discouraged.

The experiment, if successful, may serve to speed up national defense expenditures toward the small machine shops.

The plan calls for joint efforts by small factories and plants, bound together in a cooperative, to fill orders which they could not undertake separately.

Participating in the new venture are a few machine shops which have formed the Shenandoah Valley Defense Cooperative, Inc. The organization received its charter from the State Corporation Commission Saturday a few days after it was notified of its first contract, a $1,500 order for bolts, nuts and gears for use in manufacture of 788 transportation auxiliaries for anti-aircraft searchlight equipment.

In announcing the award, officials of the OPM in Washington emphasized that the significance of the action was not in the size of the subcontract, but in the fact that the cooperative had proven feasible.

Several months ago operators of some 40 Shenandoah Valley machine shops started a movement toward getting some of the defense work. They issued circulars listing machines available and calling attention to the need for speed in defense. An organization of Richmonders, known as the Citizens' Union For All-Out Defense, offered aid.

But months passed and the cooperative failed to get any contracts. Luther E. Long, of Weyer's Cave, a leader in the enterprise and now president of the cooperative, said at one time he was nearly exhausted "at apparently not getting anything tangible done, though I still have the spirit."

250 to 400 Cities Made Boom Towns By Defense Work

Chicago, May 25 (AP).—The United States defense program has turned between 250 and 400 cities into "boom towns," the American Municipal Association reported today.

A survey showed that in a typical community of this kind telephone business expanded 300 per cent, water consumption increased 10,000,000 gallons and trailer camps of workers mushroomed since preparedness activities began.

The transformation was attributed to military camps and busy industries in the vicinity of these towns, but the association found that the defense program also had a "tremendous" impact on the machinery of civic government generally.

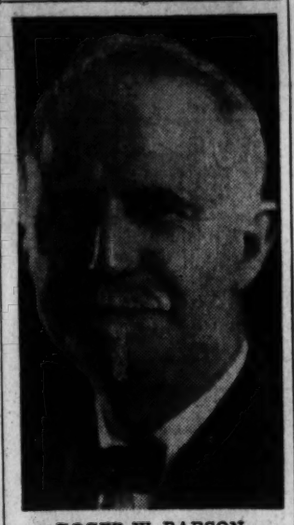
Pessimism Overdone

By Roger W. Babson

Rays Pierce Economic Clouds

In view of the changed situation in Washington following the collaboration between United France and Germany, the war will be shorter than most people think. Although we may, directly or indirectly, convoy shipments to England yet, with Congress in its present mood, there is no chance of the United States now declaring war.



ROGER W. BABSON

For this, and other reasons, there is no cause for the pessimism which is about today in Washington, New York and most of the large cities. It is true that huge sums of money are being taken from the rich through terribly high taxes. This money is being given either to labor in the form of high wages or short hours, or is being distributed to the unfortunate through various forms of relief. Billions are being spent on tanks and airplanes; but are these any more wasteful than pleasure cars and crime? Crime alone, last year, cost this country $15,000,000,000.

I got a new idea in Washington the other day. Here it is as put up to me by one of the New Deal economists. Said he: "Give us two or three years longer and these economic operations will not be necessary as the patients are constantly dying off. Isn't it just as humane to keep the economically-inefficient businessmen, farmers and unemployed free from pain and let them die naturally as it is to eliminate them now through bankruptcy? They have only a few more years to live anyway." This is a new thought to me; but there may be something in it.

Labor leaders may have seen their best days for some time to come. During the past eight years labor has had the sympathy of not only the Administration, but also of a large part of the public. Even the newspapers of the country found it bad business to combat labor. Hence, labor leaders have been riding "high, wide and handsome." This situation has greatly changed durthe past few days. Strikes have become unpopular and labor leaders have been put on the defensive.

President Roosevelt and Ma Perkins may not have the guts to get after these labor leaders as they did the bankers and the utilities; but things move very fast these days. Who would have thought that memberships on the New York Stock Exchange—which sold for $650,000 12 years ago—could now be bought for only $20,000 when they carry $20,000 life insurance! Wage workers will be protected in their desire to organize and bargain collectively; but they will not be allowed to defy the antitrust laws or hold up American consumers.

Congress has increased the debt limit to $65,000,000,000. Unless there is a negotiated peace within a reasonable time, this debt will approach $100,000,000,000. Whether we will come to the printing of the currency I do not know. Washington insists that dangerous inflation will be prevented through high taxation, price fixing and forcing wage workers to put a portion of their money into Government bonds instead of spending it. This might keep people from bidding up prices. Things which are largely wasteful or harmful will be taxed especially heavily.

On the other hand, it must be realized that inflation in some form will be one of the methods to be used for defraying the expenses of a long war. Some readjustment of the currency will be needed in order to hold our foreign trade and compete with foreign nations where inflation has already gotten well under way. A mild form of inflation might be quite helpful to business and offers one way of reducing our public debt.

Most of the pessisism now floating about comes from the older businessmen who cannot forget the "good old days" when taxes were very low and they could do as they pleased. The Nation owes these bankers, manufacturers and merchants a tremendous lot, and should treat them with respect. Statistics show, however, that they are rapidly dying off, and their places are being taken by younger men who never knew those good old days. These younger men accept present conditions as normal and do not worry about taxes, Government regulations and other handicaps.

As I travel about the country, it is interesting to note the difference in the attitude of members of our regular chambers of commerce from the attitude of the members of the junior chambers—the "Jaycees," as they are called. Most of the resolutions passed by the older groups are against something; they are trying to sweep back the ocean with a broom. The resolutions passed by the Jaycees are for something; they are interested in launching a ship to sail the seas! Every year more and more of these Jaycees are coming into a position of authority. After returning from a speaking engagement before a sedate chamber of commerce, I am a blue pessimist; but after speaking to a group of these Jaycees, I am a rip-roaring bull.

I am not pigheaded about economic conditions; nor have I rose-colored glasses on while writing this column. Some day America and the world will witness another very severe depression; but this may also wipe out the impractical features of the New Deal and again put industry, thrift, initiative and courage back into the saddle. This, however, is some years off. In the meantime, World War II is to be finished and—after a short, sharp readjustment period—we should have several years of prosperity during the reconstruction period which is to follow.

Contract Bridge

A slam misfortune is reported by Mrs. W. M. B. This time the players not only flew too high but into the wrong bush. Their long suits stangled the bidding and led them into a six no trump trap.

Here is the young woman's letter:

"Last night during a game of rubber bridge with neither side vulnerable, these cards were dealt. I will not state the manner of bidding as all four of us agree it was quite incorect after the two-spade opening by West. A small slam in no-trump was reached with the contract set three tricks."

The cards:

West	East
♠ A K J 9 3	♠ 6 5
♡ None	♡ K J 10 9 8 6 4
◇ K Q 3	◇ 10 8
♣ A K J 6 5	♣ Q 10

"How can East indicate his strength in hearts after a two-spade opening without proper honor count? Is the response two no-trump?" asks Mrs. W. M. B.

East's showing of hearts at once is all right; there is no need for him to say two no trump to stave off a slam. West should receive ample warning when the heart bids increase that his partner's hand is of little or no use to him.

The bidding should end at five clubs or spades. The possibility of two diamond losers and a trump should keep West pessimistic about a slam.

The underwriting discounts and commissions are $2.50 per share for the Preferred Stock and $2.25 per share for the Common Stock, or a total of $4,099,200.

First Lady Urges Election Of Mrs. Byron

By the Associated Press

Cumberland, Md., May 25.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today expressed the hope that Mrs. Katharine D. Byron, Democrat, would be elected next Tuesday to fill the unexpired term of her late husband.

"Her popularity in Government circles and her contacts in Washington will prove of real benefit to her constituents," the First Lady declared during a brief stopover.

"We need not only more women in Congress but more Representatives of the high qualifications possessed by Katharine Byron," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "I hope the Sixth District will select her as their Representative by a decisive majority."

Accompanied by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, Mrs. Roosevelt is motoring to Arthurdale, W. Va., where she will address high school graduates tomorrow morning and speak at a dedication of a new high school in the evening.

Among persons who met Mrs. Roosevelt during her 10-minute stay was the Right Rev. Edward T. Helfenstein, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Maryland.

Mrs. Byron later was introduced at ceremonies dedicating the $1,000,000 Cumberland airport. Her Republican opponent, A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, did not attend the dedication.

Tomorrow Stewart will wind up his campaign with a final swing around Allegany County, conceded by both party headquarters to be the pivot point of the special election. Garrett County is believed to be in Republican hands, with the party leaders placing southern counties in the Democratic column.

Theoretically a radio show should be entirely satisfactory when it's heard and not seen. And when radio was in its earlier stages that was pretty much what happened. Studios were small and there was no room for audiences. But then a select few discovered that it was very interesting to watch a radio show going on. They were friends of people connected with the broadcast. And they seemed to pass the word around. The broadcasting companies began to get thousands of requests to see broadcasts from people who were curious, from others who couldn't resist the lure of a free show.

Result has been that the broadcasting companies have planned their studios so that hundreds of spectators can now see radio shows, as well as hear them. They've bought or leased huge theaters and so vast has the traffic become that last year, for example, Columbia Broadcasting System passed out more than 2,000,000 tickets to people so that they could see broadcasting in progress. Seeing radio has become entertainment in a big way.

It's a sign of the times that today Louis Ruppel, CBS's director of publicity, announced that soldiers, sailors and marines, in uniform, could get tickets for any of Columbia's shows in New York by asking for them in CBS's studio building at 49 East Fifty-second Street. He's also sent letters to all Army and Marine camps and Navy bases telling them about it.

MEET OUR HONORARY BOARD OF DIRECTORS

THE HECHT CO. "TEN YEAR CLUB"

TRUE, it would take a mighty big Conference Room to hold a Board of Directors as large as this and frequent meetings would be impractical . . . but day in and day out, there they are, a group of loyal, eager folks who've "grown up with the store" . . . veterans of 10 years to 45 years of service . . . a vital factor, a helpful guide to us in our daily consumer relations. Any wonder we call them our "Honorary Board of Directors" . . . that we turn to them for support in maintaining "The Store We Owe Our Customers?"

WE'VE sixteen hundred people in our store family . . . a sizable little army when you think about it. And we think about it often . . . especially at this time of year, when the members of our "Ten Year Club" get together for their Annual Celebration. We're proud of these employees . . . proud of their achievements. Prouder still of the group spirit that has held them together as a happy family for so many years.

FOR this group spirit is the bulwark of this institution, a truly priceless ingredient that permeates not only this club, but the entire store. Not through accident or happenstance. It's born of a policy of "promoting from within," evidenced by the fact that 75% of all our executives, buyers, department service heads and assistants have come from the ranks. Beginners in this store can point to top executives who not only "started from scratch," but have never forgotten it.

IS it any wonder we consider them our Honorary Board of Directors . . . that we take their counsel in facilitating our service to you? For, of course, without YOU neither The Hecht Co. nor The Ten Year Club could exist. And so we speak for every employee listed on this page . . . for every worker at The Hecht Co. when we say YOUR loyal patronage and recognition is a source of daily inspiration in our service to the community
